U. S. Subsidy For Railroads Frowned On By Roosevelt

President Confers With Industry's Executives, Labor Leaders.

Way to Forestall Wage Cuts Sought

The Railroad Crisis.

President Roosevelt and rail management and labor representatives conferred on possible legislation to aid the carriers.

Roosevelt Confers.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Meeting at the White House with railroad executives and labor leaders yesterday, President Roosevelt is understood to have frowned on a plan for payment of a Government subsidy to the carriers if they agreed to maintain present wage scales and undertook a program of construction and equipment replacement.

Details of the subsidy plan were kept secret and it is not clear where the proposal originated. John J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, though declining to discuss the White House conference, said talk of a subsidy did not originate with the railroad managements.

One report was to the effect that the proposed subsidy was in the form of a Government guarantee to make up the difference between present railroad earnings and a figure based on income for some fair period of the past. The maximum cost to the Treasury under the plan, it was said, might run as high as $300,000,000 annually.

Seek to Avoid Pay Cuts.

The belief prevailed that the idea originated with George Harrison, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives, and his associates in railroad labor ranks as a move to forestall a reduction in the present railroad wage scales. Other than the report that the President has commented that he did not see how such a Government subsidy could be justified, nothing was known about what transpired at the White House.

Several weeks ago at a press conference the President expressed opposition to a Government subsidy for railroads, asserting it would be a step toward State capitalism. At that time the President expressed a desire that the Interstate Commerce Commission hasten action on a petition of the carriers for rate increases, which it was estimated would boost their rate levels about 12.9 per cent.

Several Parleys Held.

The commission, however, failed to grant the railroads their request in full. Indeed, the rate increases allowed last month averaged only about 5.3 per cent of existing rate levels. In several quarters high in the Administration the opinion prevails now that the I. C. C. should have granted in full the petition of the railroads and that such action even now should be taken.

Since the I. C. C. acted, the President has had several railroad conferences and finally directed I. C. C. Chairman Walter M. W. Splawn and two of his fellow commissioners, Joseph B. Eastman and Charles D. Mahaffie, to draw up a program for Soldier, Arrested in New Mexico, Faces Grilling in Desert Deaths.

By the United Press.

Van Horn, Tex., April 4.—Authorities tonight looked for a trail of travelers' checks in their search for the killers who tortured and shot Mrs. Weston G. Frome, 46, of Berkeley, Calif., society woman, and her pretty daughter, Nancy, 23, to death last Wednesday.

They believed a woman stood by while a man used fire torture and jumped on the writhing forms of the women before he shot them. Peace officers could find no reason but sadism for the torture, unless the killer believed his victims had concealed more than $150 in cash they were known to be carrying on their leisurely automobile trip from Berkeley to Parris Island, S. C. The rest of their money was in travelers' checks.

Police were not certain whether one or two men robbed and killed the women. Two weapons were used in the shooting.

The mother and daughter were believed to have died Wednesday afternoon. The bodies were found Sunday night. In the four days between commission and discovery of the crime the killer had time to flee hundreds of miles.

Police of Southwestern States watched highways for suspicious persons. First arrest was at Alamogordo, N. Mex., where Mickey J.

Veteran Office To Be Exempt From Merger

House Leaders Confident Bill Will Pass Without Further Concessions.

By Sidney Olson.

With the granting of one further minor concession to opponents of the Government reorganization bill, House leaders decided yesterday to stand pat on the measure as it is, confident that it now will pass by a substantial majority.

The new firmness in the leaders' stand stemmed partially from their rising anger at the "dictatorship" propaganda spread nationally against the bill, and partly from a flock of members who left fence-perches to throw their weight on the Administration's side.

One leader said that the Administration forces had gained 15 sure votes during the day. This was the least optimistic view taken.

The leaders said yesterday they would not oppose an amendment to be offered by Representative Glenn Griswold (Democrat), of Indiana, exempting the Veterans' Bureau from the transfer-merger authority granted the President in the measure.

Representative Lindsay Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, and Representative John J. Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, field marshals in the fight, took the view that while there was no necessity

Arrested by a precinct detective, a 31-year-old colored man was identified positively yesterday by Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), Indiana, as one of a trio who held him up a month ago.

Precinct Detective Frank Ashby of Second Precinct, arrested William Lewis Watson, colored, of 37 I street northwest. Police said Watson was placed in a line-up in a cell block and identified by Shulte, who had lost two watches and several dollars in cash in the holdup.

Bill Is Signed For TVA Quiz; 'No Comment'

Garner and Bankhead to Name Committee of 10 at Once.

President Roosevelt signed last night, without comment, the joint Congressional resolution authorizing a $50,000 investigation of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Vice President John N. Garner and Speaker William B. Bankhead will announce the names of the ten members of the investigating committee—five from each chamber—today immediately after the Congress convenes.

Intense interest, in and out of Congress, was focused on the personnel of the committee. It was generally believed, however, that none of the numerous sponsors of investigation resolutions would be named, in exact contrast to usual Congressional procedure.

Norris Won't Serve.

Senator George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, and Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, both resolution authors, have declared they will not serve, but Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, bitter TVA opponent, has voiced eagerness to be on the committee.

In the House, Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, long insistent on a TVA investigation, evaluated his chances of committee membership yesterday thus: "Boy, I won't even be near the door when they're passing it out!" Nor are Representatives Andrew J. May (Democrat), of Kentucky, TVA foe, nor Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, expected to be appointees. Both authored similar resolutions.

Must Report In 1939.

General opinion also held that the $50,000 investigation fund will be exhausted long before the committee has completed its lengthy task, and Senator Norris has predicted that the total appropriation will finally rise to $250,000.

An investigation of utility activities in harassing the TVA with lawsuits also is included. The investigation committee must report to the next Congress on January 3, 1939.

U. S. Indicts Warrings as Tax Evaders

By Howard F. Wentworth.

The United States Attorney's office is prepared to investigate reported "protection payoffs" attributed to the Warring brothers in their efforts to escape gambling prosecutions, it was learned last night.

Employing the same tactics which sent Al Capone to Alcatraz, local and Federal authorities yesterday secured indictment of the Warrings—Emmett, Leo and Charles—on charges of conspiracy to defraud the Government by income tax evasion.

The true bill, returned as a final official act of the March grand jury, named also Gordon L. R. Sadur, tax-accounting expert, and his brother-in-law, Henry L. Sherr, an employe of the accountancy firm, as conspirators.

"Large Sums."

In reporting the indictment to Justice Jesse C. Adkins in District Court, the jury accused the Warrings of attempting to conceal certain sums of reputed "protection money" under tax exempt entries in the books and records of their "commission brokerage" business.

The indictment recited "payments of large sums" to persons "unknown to this grand jury" for the purpose of obtaining "immunity from prosecution for violations of the laws of the District of Columbia prohibiting gambling."

Assistant United States Attorney John Wilson, who with agents of the Internal Revenue Bureau inquired into the Warring sources of income and presented evidence to the grand jury, said the reported "payoff" angle "is in no manner considered closed."

No Immediate Evidence.

Although his office has no immediate evidence as to identities of the so-called "protection money" recipients, Wilson indicated an investigation would be continued.

"All we know at present," he said, "is that protection money was paid. We don't know to whom. There are no records of the payoffs and naturally the Warrings won't talk. Any further evidence that comes to our attention, however, will be carefully looked into. We want to bring every angle of this case to light."

Less than an hour after the indictment was returned yesterday, all five defendants appeared in District Court to post bond. The Warrings were released under $5,000 each while Sadur and Sherr posted $2,500 each. The charge of conspiracy carries a sentence of two years and a possible $10,000 fine.

Michigan Strike Settled, 7 Power Plants Evacuated

Detroit, April 4 (AP).—Gov. Frank Murphy announced late today settlement of a strike in which a C. I. O. union seized Consumers Power Co. plants in four Michigan cities. He said an existing agreement between the Utilities Workers Organizing Committee and the power company would be extended for four months.

Gov. Murphy said the seven plants which U. W. O. C. members have occupied and operated since Friday were being evacuated by "strikers" and restored to the company.

Roosevelt Requests $500,000 To Start Jefferson Memorial

President Roosevelt yesterday indicated approval of the modified design for a memorial to Thomas Jefferson by submitting to Congress an estimate of $500,000 for an initial appropriation to start work on the $3,000,000 project.

Chairman Taylor, of the House Appropriations Committee, said the estimate had been referred to the sub-committee on deficiency appropriations. While declining to predict the result, he said that the President and Representative Boylan (Democrat), of New York, a member of the committee, are vitally interested in seeing the memorial built.

The Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission announced last week that the modified plan called for construction of a domed edifice on the southeast bank of the Tidal Basin.

Daniel W. Bell, acting budget director, in explaining the estimate to Congress said:

"It is expected that a contract or contracts for the construction of the memorial will soon be entered into by the commission and that the amount of the estimate, $500,000, will be required to meet obligations during the first year of construction."

Leahy Asks 45,000-Ton Battleships

$40,000,000 Anti-Aircraft Funds Added in Army Bill.

By the United Press.

Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, yesterday urged the Senate Naval Affairs Committee to amend the $1,121,000,000 Navy expansion program to permit construction of the world's largest and most powerful dreadnaughts, and at the same time warned that the present United States fleet is inferior to the Japanese armada.

The Senate Appropriations Committee reported favorably a $489,808,500 War Department supply bill, adding approximately $40,000,000 to the House-approved measure for coastal antiaircraft defenses. The bill also provides for an increase of 5,000 in the standing army and the establishment of an enlisted reserve of 75,000 men.

Equal to 55,000 Tons.

Leahy told the committee that in the light of present world conditions the super-Navy bill should be revised to authorize construction of three 45,000-ton battleships, instead of the 35,000 tonners provided in the bill as approved by the House.

Such vessels, probably armed with 18-inch guns, would surpass any warship afloat today, including the 42,000-ton British battle cruiser Hood. Naval construction experts pointed out that modern building methods would make a 45,000-ton battleship today at least as large as a 55,000-tonner of the type now in commission. The tremendous power of the proposed new dreadnaughts is thus accented by the fact that America's largest battleship today is only 33,000 tons.

U. S. Behind Japan.

Leahy, testifying at a closed session of the committee, said he had not yet decided whether 45,000-ton vessels should be constructed at this time, but added that the Navy should be free to start them when events warrant.

In this connection he pointed out that the United States has fallen far behind both Great Britain and Japan in modern, underage warships, stating that this country is superior to Japan only in the number of battleships.

On the basis of the 5-5-3 ratio established by the Washington and London naval treaties, Leahy said the present comparative strengths of the three navies in modern vessels is:

	Britain	Japan	U. S.
Battleships	5	2.8	3.8
Aircraft carriers	5	4.5	2.7
Heavy cruisers	5	2.3	2.3
Destroyers	5	4.1	3
Submarines	5	3.9	3.2

Leahy said the figures take into account modern vessels in commission, ships being constructed and others actually authorized or appropriated for, but do not include vessels contemplated in President Roosevelt's expansion program.

Quick Fund Plea Forecast.

Leahy's recommendation regarding 45,000-ton warships was believed inspired by Secretary of State Cordell Hull who notified the powers last week that the United States, in the interests of national security, has been forced to abandon restrictions of the 1936 London Treaty limiting battleships to 35,000 tons.

Committee Chairman David I. Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, announced after the hearing that it was his understanding President

Britain Providing A Gas-Proof Bag For Every Baby

London, April 4 (AP).—A rubber "gas bag" for babies is the home office's latest device to make Britain's 40,000,000 inhabitants "gas tight" in the event of war.

A spokesman said today babies 2 years old and under would be provided a rubber fabric bag capable of inclosing their bodies entirely.

The bag has a pump for injecting air through a filter. The pump must be used every 15 minutes to prevent the child from suffocating.

Soviet Denies Tokyo Claim Of China Aid

Litvinoff Blames Report on Attempt to Stir Up Trouble.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, April 4.—Soviet Russia tonight rejected a Japanese protest that accused the Soviet of lending military aid to China in her war with Japan.

Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff denied the Soviet government had sent any army detachments or officers to bolster China's forces.

"Any declaration contradicting this fact and incapable of verification," Litvinoff declared, "could have been laid only by circles which already are well known for their systematic fabrication of all kinds of false reports with the object of sharpening relations between Japan and the Soviet union.

"Consequences" Threatened.

The Japanese protest, delivered earlier today by Ambassador Mamor Shigemitsu, warned that Russia would have to "assume responsibility for the consequences" if such aid continued.

Japanese sources said Shigemitsu delivered the protest on instructions from Tokyo and that it was based on two incidents.

Shigemitsu, they said, told Litvinoff that a Soviet plane was shot down near Nanking January 26, and two bodies found in the plane were those of Soviet army fliers.

A Soviet bomber was shot down 10 miles northeast of Wuhu March 14, the Japanese said.

Soviet Flier Captured.

Two members of the bomber's crew were killed but a third who parachuted down was captured. He was identified as Mikhail Andreovitch Donin, and was quoted as telling the Japanese that he left Leningrad in October with more than 10 Soviet fliers. They flew via Urumchi, in Chinese Turkestan, to Hankow, provisional Chinese capital, where they arrived January 16.

Russia's envoy in Tokyo already has told Foreign Minister Koki Hirota that the Soviet government is conforming to international rules on the question of sales of arms and planes to China, Litvinoff replied to Shigemitsu.

He pointed out arms have been supplied "also to Japan by many other countries."

Litvinoff declared that Japan was well aware foreign volunteers of various countries were serving in the Chinese army, but that so far as known Tokyo had failed to protest to any of the nations from which the volunteers came.

Japanese Drive South.

Shanghai, April 4 (AP).—Swiftly driving southward after the capture of Taierhchwang's smoldering ruins, Japanese forces tonight threatened to cut the east end of the vital Lunghai Railway and outflank the Chinese defenders of strategic Suchow.

Japanese said the 10-day battle for Taierhchwang was the "fiercest fought on the Tientsin-Pukow front" and disclosed that only three Japanese detachments opened the assault but ten additional detachments were finally needed.

Blum Places Fate in Hands Of Parliament

Party Groups Debate Support of Dictatorial Finance Bill.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 4.—Possible overthrow of Premier Blum's People's Front government rested tonight with party groups debating whether to support the cabinet's request for extraordinary financial powers.

The Socialist premier placed the fate of his government in the hands of Parliament by proposing a series of financial measures not dissimilar to the programs of the totalitarian states and appealing to all Frenchmen to keep discipline in view of the dangerous international situation.

The Chamber of Deputies finance committee approved the program by a vote of 25 to 18 with eight members not voting.

Chief among the proposals was a measure which would permit the government to take 22,550,000,000 francs (about $676,500,000) paper profit by revaluation of the Bank of France's gold reserves. Other

Cleveland, April 4 (AP).—Fernando de Los Rios, Spanish Ambassador, tonight termed "calumny" and "all insidious lies" assertions of the Rev. Dr. Joseph B. Code, Catholic University of America professor, that De Los Rios had spent $13,000,000 in America to win sympathy for "the Communist-dominated Spanish leftist government."

"That statement shows he has a very low estimate of American public opinion if he thinks it can be corrupted so easily," the ambassador, here for a lecture, said.

Loyalists Murdered Hundreds In Lerida, Refugees Declare

By the United Press.

Lerida, Spain, April 4.—Civilian refugees asserted tonight that Spanish loyalist troops assassinated several hundred persons, including a bishop and 70 priests, before abandoning the ancient city of Lerida to Gen. Franco.

An official of the municipal jail, who refused to flee with the government forces, said the victims included Catholic Bishop Silvio Huig.

Before abandoning the right bank of the Segre, the jailer said, the loyalist authorities ordered all the prisoners remaining in his care transferred to the ancient Castle of Gardeny, now a barracks, where bloody fighting occurred Sunday.

There was no evidence of their fate, the official said.

He added that several hundred persons were forced to abandon their homes, under threat of execution, and accompany the loyalist troops across the Segre before the main bridges were blown up.

All of the several hundred victims of the assassinations were men, the jailer said, except one woman shopkeeper.

A young man surrendered to the nationalists and explained that he had remained in hiding six months in an attic, after being called to service, and that his mother smuggled food to him.

Last Road Cut.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France, April 4.—Spanish insurgent officers tonight announced Gen. Franco's forces had cut Catalonia off from the rest of government Spain including Valencia and Madrid.

Officers at Irun said insurgent advance columns were at the gates of Tortosa, 130 miles southeast of Barcelona, and had set up machine-guns and field artillery commanding the last highway to link the two sections of government territory.

The insurgent guns, frowning down on the seaboard road, severed all traffic between the north and south.

[Insurgent warships assembled in the Mediterranean and trained their guns on Tortosa, the United Press reported. It was reported they might move in close with landing parties to aid in cutting the coast road.

[Franco's black-tipped bombing squadrons, including German Junkers planes, roared down the coastline, bombing towns and cities and attempting to break the morale of civilians.—Editor's note.]

Italians In Van.

Capture of Tortosa, at the delta head of the Ebro River flowing into the Mediterranean, virtually would complete Insurgent Gen. Garcia Valino's march to the sea.

Valino led his hard-fighting Italians and Moorish legionnaires in a 10-mile advance during the day to reach the ancient town, strongly fortified by high walls and several outworks. It is entered through seven massive gates.

A second insurgent column reported the capture of Morella, strategic city in Castellon Province, from whose peaks Gen. Miguel Aranda said the Mediterranean was visible.

Morella is 38 miles from the sea and 130 miles southwest of Barcelona, the government capital. It is on a main highway running from Zaragoza to Castellon on the coast.

1,000 Prisoners Taken.

Aranda reported the capture of 1,000 government prisoners in a spectacular move over the nearby mountainous terrain.

From Morella the insurgents had the advantage of a broad highway cutting through the plains down to the Mediterranean.

Aranda's men advanced southward along the main highway from the village of La Pobleta, west of Morella, and through the towering Sierra de San Marcos, capturing positions from which they got their first glimpse of the sea.

Bill to Let RFC Help Business Voted in House

Senate Clause Requiring I. C. C. Approval of Rail Loans Eliminated.

The Glass-Steagall bill granting the Reconstruction Finance Corporation authority to lend $1,500,000,000 to battle the recession shot through the House yesterday by a vote of 339 to 6.

The House bill differed slightly from the Senate measure, passed last week, in that it omits a clause requiring Interstate Commerce Commission approval of RFC loans to railroads. This is the present law, but was reiterated in a Senate amendment, and provides that the I. C. C. must certify a railroad is not in need of reorganization before an RFC loan can be made to it. With, broadly speaking, nearly all railroads in need of some measure of reorganization, some difficulty was foreseen yesterday for the RFC in any program to aid the carriers.

The bill is expected to go to the White House shortly, as virtually no opposition to the measure could be found in either House.

One major section of the measure allows the RFC to make long-term loans to business. Under present restrictions, no loans can be made with maturities dated later than 1945.

Another section revives the RFC's former power to lend to States and municipalities for work-giving projects, but it appeared that few States and municipalities will appeal to the RFC for such aid, since most of them are obtaining money at interest rates considerably under the RFC's 4 per cent.

In brief debate on the measure, Representative Carl E. Mapes (Republican), of Michigan, charged that the omission of the Senate language in the "railroad" provision was an attempt to circumvent the I. C. C., which is one of the few remaining agencies with a "semblance of independence."

SEC's Leading Foe Forced to Register Its $3,000,000,000

The giant $3,000,000,000 Electric Bond & Share Co., standard-bearer in the fight against the 1935 public utility holding company act, yesterday registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission after losing its three-year battle in the Supreme Court.

The company operates in 32 States and several foreign countries.

SEC officials estimated that $13,000,000,000 of the total $15,000,000,000 of assets of companies subject to the law are now registered, and they predicted the balance would follow within a short time.

District financial prophets who last year estimated a $3,000,000 return on the business privilege tax were approximately $2,000,000 off, according to statistics released yesterday by Tax Collector C. M. Towers.

All told, including previously collected returns and licenses, the District received about $1,500,000. Of course, some people have not paid the tax, it was explained, and will have to pay a penalty.

Recently, however, District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan told a Senate committee that the return would be "close to $2,250,000. Officials now hope it will reach $2,000,000.

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman

THANKS to the new spirit of independence which the House of Representatives is displaying in dealing with major legislation, the reorganization bill gradually is being improved — although several important objections remain to it. If the rate of improvement established over the week-end continues there can be no reason why the measure should not be passed.

WALTMAN.

But the House coalition should not let up its fight—not to kill the bill, but to force amendments which would safeguard the country against one-man power. The proposal for a single civil service administrator should be the next provision to go. There is no room around here for one-man government, especially in a post which so vitally affects all Federal personnel.

Only one argument can be made in favor of abolishing the present bi-partisan three-man civil service commission and that argument is efficiency—"efficiency," the word by which Mussolini and Hitler justify their actions and their forms of government. And that promised efficiency will be achieved only if the right man is named by the President to be administrator.

It is true that the legislation gives this official a 15-year term, but it is likewise true that, under the Myers decision of the Supreme Court, the President could remove this official at his pleasure. Under the principle that it is easier to control one man than it is to control three men, the net result of the legislation is to tighten the personal control of the President over the civil service—which is directly contrary to the spirit of the merit system.

Mr. Roosevelt has not shown such interest in promoting the merit system as to encourage confidence that he will administer the new law in a lofty manner. Perhaps he will. He also should be given the benefit of the doubt. But we know, as pointed out by the Brownlow Committee, that although the number of Federal civilian employes increased from 78,201 from June 30, 1932, to 824,259 June 30, 1936, the number of employes during that period in the classified service increased from 467,161 to 498,725.

But aside from Mr. Roosevelt, Congress in the civil service portion of the bill is legislating permanently for the future. This one-man administrator, if the bill is passed as now written, will be here long after Mr. Roosevelt is gone. Who knows what kind of man may reach the Presidency in 1940 or 1944?

Still another phase of the matter that requires some consideration is what an ambitious man in the post of civil service administrator might do. It is not unknown in American politics that men have used public power entrusted to them to advance their personal political fortunes. The Federal Government now has close to 1,000,000 employes and that is a sizable block of jobs for an ambitious man to play with, if he so desires.

Think for a moment of the present situation in the Tennessee Valley Authority. The truth of that situation remains to be developed by Congressional inquiry. But one member of the TVA board has charged certain things against his colleagues and they in turn have charged other things against him. If the TVA, however, had been under a single administrator anything could have happened in that agency without the country knowing about it. Congress would not trust the TVA to a single administrator (although under the pending bill the President could place it under one), but it is asked to place all Federal employes in all departments under one man.

Even if it can be successfully argued that a one-man administrator possesses virtues lacked by a three-member commission, Congress at least should undertake to devise a method of more effectively divorcing the Civil Service administrator from the President than this bill does.

As long as the Myers decision remains binding law it probably would be unconstitutional and without effect for Congress to provide that the administrator could be removed only by consent of House and Senate. Yet there is no certainty that the present Supreme Court would follow the Myers decision in connection with such a requirement. Seven of the members of the present court refused to follow the Myers decision in the Humphrey case.

Indeed, two of the foremost liberal jurists ever to sit on the Supreme Court—Justices Louis D. Brandeis and the late Oliver Wendell Holmes—dissented from the Myers decision and it generally is believed that the majority of the tribunal was greatly influenced in that opinion by the then Chief Justice William Howard Taft, who had been President.

But at least Congress could require that the civil service administrator must be charged with specified acts of alleged misconduct and that he would be entitled to a hearing before the President could remove him—or the President's power might be restricted to suspending the administrator, with the power of removal lodged in Congress after public hearings. All this would tend to curb arbitrary or autocratic action by the Chief Executive.

Throughout this entire reorganization debate, the words of one New Dealer have constantly rung in the ears of this writer. Those words were:

"Our resplendent economic autocracy does not want to return to that individualism of which they prate, even though the advantages under that system went to the ruthless and the strong. They realize that in 34 months we have built up new instruments of public power. In the hands of a people's government this power is wholesome and proper. But in the hands of political puppets of an economic autocracy such power would provide shackles for the liberties of the people."

In those words President Roosevelt in his message to Congress in January, 1936, described the powers which the New Deal had taken unto itself. If his words were true then, they remain true today—and their truth will be even greater should the reorganization bill beome law without a series of restrictive amendments.

Garner to Pick 5 for U. S. Job Inquiry Today

Ellender, Slated as Chairman, Wants All Sections to Be Represented.

Vice President Garner today will appoint a special committee of five Senators to conduct an inquiry into charges of malpractice in administration of the civil service laws and the classification act.

Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, author of the inquiry resolution, returned to the Capitol yesterday and conferred at once with the Vice President. It was understood that Garner said he would name Ellender chairman and asked him to recommend the other four members of the committee.

Senators who are being considered for the appointments, it is understood, are Senators Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, a member of the Civil Service Committee; Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota; Austin (Republican), of Vermont, or Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire; and Johnson (Republican), of California, or Schwartz (Democrat), of Wyoming.

All Sections Get Voice.

Ellender indicated he wants all sections of the country represented on the committee because of the fact that Government employes are drawn from all areas.

The Louisiana Senator disclosed that he now has more than 1,000 complaints on file and that many more anonymous telephone calls have been made to his office by Federal workers who were too fearful of reprisals to give their names.

He also said he has been informed that some bureau chiefs are changing their policies of administration in anticipation of the Senate inquiry.

Money Given Clerks.

One division head, he has been told, took money allocated to his unit for administrative promotions and distributed it among clerks and stenographers who had been overlooked in previous years.

Up to that time, he said, the custom of that division and other bureau chiefs had been to take similar funds and divide them among the petty executives and favorites of the division head.

One woman who complained about being persistently overlooked in promotions, Ellender said, has since been promoted although his office has taken no hand in the matter.

Secrecy Promised.

Ellender said that hearings by the committee probably will be both executive and open. Federal employes who will testify publicly, he said, will be given the opportunity, whereas those who insist on secrecy probably will be heard behind closed doors.

Prior to the beginning of the hearings, within 12 or 15 days, Ellender will talk privately with many of the Government workers who have filed complaints with his office. He thus will weed out the trivial and minor grievances and concentrate on the major complaints.

Former Government employes, who have recently left the service, have volunteered to testify, and Ellender expects them to speak freely because they will have no fear of reprisals.

Although the inquiry will not begin before mid-April, Ellender expects to conclude it in time to make recommendations to the Senate for remedial legislation before adjournment.

Henry B. duPont Asks Gift Assessment Cut

Henry B. duPont, of Wilmington, Del., asked the board of tax appeals yesterday to award him a refund of $51,048 on his 1934 Federal gift taxes, instead of requiring him to pay an additional $115,810.

The additional amount was assessed against him by the Internal Revenue Bureau. The controversy arose over the valuation of securities given by duPont to his three children in 1934.

New Junket to Philippines Discussed on Hill, Island Editor Reveals.

A junket to the Philippines is being discussed by Congressional leaders, it was reported yesterday by Porfirio U. Sevilla, publisher of the Philippine-American Advocate Magazine. Sevilla, who returned to New York yesterday after a three-day visit here seeking to lay the foundation for a Congressional inquiry into "the entire Philippine situation," said he found the Senators and Representatives he met "fed up with the whole situation." The publisher said they told him they would support an inquiry.

The Maritime Commission would be directed to arrange for operation of three large liners in the intercoastal trade for a two-year period under the terms of a resolution adopted yesterday by the House. The resolution directs the commission, if it acquires the three ships from the American Line Steamship Corporation in a pending deal, to continue operating them in the intercoastal service until July 1, 1940. President Roosevelt recently indicated he was opposed to the plan. A similar resolution is pending before the Senate Commerce Committee.

A $5,996,200 appropriation for 1939 work on the Blue Ridge and Natchez Trace Parkways was recommended yesterday by the Senate Appropriations Committee. It also recommended striking from the House-approved appropriations bill for the National Park Service a provision including the name of Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, of the House Ways and Means Committee as the official name of the project. It was explained no disrespect was meant to Doughton, but that participating States had passed laws designating the development without using Doughton's name.

The proposal to apply the labor relations act to contractors with the Government and borrowers from the Government—would bring "increased confusion and added uncertainty," John W. O'Leary, spokesman for the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, declared in a statement filed with the Senate Labor Committee. O'Leary's brief asserted such a law would "naturally lessen the number of employers who can bid on Government contracts." Capt. C. W. Fisher, of the Navy, said it would curtail bidding on Navy contracts.

Vice President John Nance Garner confided to reporters yesterday that he had his eye on a ranch in Webb County, Tex., as a possible real estate investment. The only result was to arouse speculation as to whether the Vice President would retire at the end of his present term. Garner would say only that if he bought the ranch he would visit it occasionally as he now visits his Uvalde, Tex., home.

By James D. Secrest.

The House yesterday passed and sent to the White House a bill which authorizes the closing of Military road as a hazard to air safety at Washington-Hoover Airport.

The fate of the airport, which repeatedly has been condemned by aviation agencies and fliers for its dangers, now rests with President Roosevelt, who last September killed a similar measure by pocket veto.

Chairman May, of the House Military Affairs Committee, who piloted both bills through the House, said he will confer with the President this week and urge him to sign the measure. He said he had had no indication of the President's attitude.

Test Farm Untouched.

"The present bill does not include the annexation of 53 acres of the Arlington Experimental Farm," May explained, "as last year's bill did.

"I understand this was the basis of one of the President's major objections to the bill.

"Testimony was offered to our committee that it would cost the War Department $40,000 to repair Military road. Our bill proposes to relieve the Government of this cost, to assess the cost of constructing a new highway on the airport, and to eliminate an admitted hazard."

Last year when President Roosevelt killed the first bill, he issued a statement urging the early construction of a national airport and intimated his indorsement of Gravelly Point, which for a decade has been the center of controversy.

Besides objecting to the leasing of a part of the experimental farm to the National Airport Corporation, he registered disapproval of the closing of Military road, which he described as "an important highway leading to the heart of the National Capital."

A provision for payment by the airport of $25,000 to Arlington County for construction of a substitute highway may eradicate the latter objection.

50-Year Lease on Road.

The lease of a part of Military road to the airport is for a period of 50 years at a rental of $1 a year. The property involved contains one and one-half acres.

The bill authorizes, however, that the Secretary of War shall convey to the National Airport Corporation by quitclaim deed an additional 3¾ acres forming the part of Military road from Highway Bridge to Arlington Cemetery.

The section to be leased lies east of the Washington and Southern freight branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Unless the President signs the Copeland-May bill, it is likely that the National Capital will be forced to continue to make the best of a hazardous commercial airport for another year.

While hearings have been held on bills to develop Gravelly Point and purchase a tract at Suitland, Md., it is doubtful that Congress will approve either before adjournment.

The Camp Springs measure, passed by the Senate last year upon recommendation of the Washington Airport Commission, is still on the House calendar, but no efforts have been made to get a vote.

So effective has been the opposition of the Navy Department to the Camp Springs site, because of the proximity of the Cheltenham radio station, that even the President in conversations with members of the House has indicated his disapproval of establishing a national airport there.

Fechner Lauds Roosevelt for Youth Program

Declaring President Roosevelt "the greatest humanitarian the world has ever known," Robert Fechner, director of the Civilian Conservation Corps, last night asserted the Chief Executive has given "American youth something to fight for."

"There was a time when there was no limit to the opportunities offered the average American boy," Fechner said, "but the recent change in the economic and industrial system, brought about by the present inventive and machine age, has left little opportunity for our unemployed youth."

Fechner spoke before a large gathering of CCC boys celebrating the fifth anniversary of the organization at Camp NP-8 in honor of the teaching staff and student body of the McKinley Evening High School. Fourteen CCC boys from the camp are completing their courses at the school.

Fechner termed the CCC "the closest thang in the Administration to the President's heart."

C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of the National Capital Parks and Conrad L. Wirth, assistant director of the National Park service, also addressed the meeting and welcomed the camp to its future location in Rock Creek Park.

Entertainment for the event was provided by the Hampton University Philharmonic Glee Club, of Hampton, Va., which responded to several encores. Enrollees of the camp attending the McKinley School are: L. Berger, R. Bennett, L. Burr, E. Downey, R. Fleishman, M. Givot, E. Jones, F. Jenkins, L. Kelby, J. McDonald, A. Moraski, A. Nosak, E. Rose, and A. Pechulis.

Jobless Compensation Fraud Puts Maid in Jail 180 Days

Woman Pleads Guilty to Receiving $14 Benefits While Working; Three Others to Be Judged Friday on Same Charges.

A 180-day jail sentence, the first penalty imposed for taking advantage of the rece ' unemployment compensation act, was meted out in Police Court yesterday to Helen Lee, 38, colored, of 817 Second street southwest. Helen was charged with three counts of making false statements for obtaining unemployment compensation benefits.

According to John F. Bischoff, claims deputy for the unemployment compensation board, the woman received three checks totaling $14 during March. Each check was given to her by the board only after she stated she still was unemployed.

During that period, she was receiving $8.25 a week as a domestic in the service of Assistant Corporation Counsel Lloyd B. Harrison. Harrison testified that she voluntarily quit work about two weeks ago.

Pleading guilty, she was sentenced to 60 days on each count.

"Other people are out of work, all but starving to death, often unable to get relief," he pointed out. "You have taken bread out of the mouths of others, as well as money from the Government."

Three persons already have appeared in Police Court on similar charges. They have been referred to the probation officer for investigation and will receive judgment Friday.

Bischoff said after yesterday's trial that the board recently received a check from one of its applicants. It was accompanied by the explanation that the recipient obtained the unemployment benefits by false pretenses and that his conscience had been bothering him.

New Deal Hurt Colleges, Says E. M. Hopkins

Income From Investments Drops From 5 to 3.8% at Dartmouth.

Economic policies of the New Deal were cited yesterday by President Ernest M. Hopkins of Dartmouth College as the principal cause of the present business recession.

Pointing to the pitiful financial condition of the railroads, he expressed doubt consolidation would improve their situation, explaining that "the traditional widows and orphans, as well as schools, hospitals and insurance companies" would surely suffer.

The recession, Dr. Hopkins continued, has seriously affected the income received by educational institutions, but added Dartmouth College finances were in a better condition than those of many other colleges and universities of the country.

Incomes Drop.

He pointed out that a return of 5 per cent on invested securities was the general income in 1932, while today "Dartmouth is among the leaders and we are receiving, on the average, about 3.8 per cent on our investments."

There is considerable doubt, he remarked, that a change in political action would have any vital effect on business at this time. "Assurances" might be of some assistance in restoring economic equilibrium, but in the main, Dr. Hopkins said, the time is three months past when any effective governmental action could be expected to aid business. He also expressed the opinion present difficulties would have "to run their course, whatever that may be."

Government spending was cited as a hindrance to healthy business recovery on the ground that a limit would eventually be reached when further expenditures or dependence upon Federal credit could not be continued.

Freedom Praised.

Speaking before Dartmouth alumni last night, Dr. Hopkins said that one of the greatest things about the educational system in America is its lack of standardization and its freedom from restrictions on thought.

"The American college was established to develop intelligence," he said, "and there is no intelligence in standardization of thought. There has never been an individual or a generation wise enough to tell people what they should think."

He described world conditions today as "unbelievable" and said American colleges were fortunate in their freedom from outside control.

Roswell Magill, Undersecretary of the Treasury, and Sidney C. Hayward, secretary of Dartmouth College, also spoke.

Court Dismisses 100 Complainants

When Police Court Clerk Ralph Given, jr., yesterday announced "All witnesses in the case of John A. Moore are dismissed until further notice for a jury trial," approximately 100 persons rose and filed from the courtroom.

Moore pleaded not guilty to 28 charges of petty larceny and one grand larceny. Judge John P. McMahon set bond at $9,400. The defendant gave his address as 637½ Callan street northeast.

2 Billions Seen As WPA's Cost For Next Year

President's Estimate in His Budget Held Only Half Required Sum.

About $2,000,000,000, in the opinion of Works Progress Administration officials, will be needed to carry the relief load through the next fiscal year, it was learned yesterday. Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, his chief deputy administrator, Aubrey Williams, and his chief economist, Leon Henderson, who returned with President Roosevelt from Warm Springs, Ga., are said to have submitted that estimate to Mr. Roosevelt during the trip.

The President's budget message in January contained an estimate of $1,000,000,000 for relief. The WPA officials now are reported to feel that that sum will provide for needs only until the next January meeting of Congress. The President already has emphasized that the estimate in his budget message was only tentative.

Hearings on the relief bill will be commenced by the House Appropriations Committee next week. A special Senate committee now is investigating the causes of unemployment and relief.

'Won't Pout,' Lawyers Say at Claims Court

Some Counsel Oppose Small Tribunal, Though; It's Officially Open.

The District Bar Association "has decided it won't pout" over establishment of a Small Claims Court, though many of its members opposed the move, Bolitha J. Laws association president, said yesterday at inauguration of the court. He spoke to attorneys who crowded the small courtroom where Judge George C. Aukum of Municipal Court, inauguration chairman, shared the bench with Judge Nathan Cayton, Judge Ellen K. Raedy and Judge Armond W. Scott.

Judge Cayton officially assumed the bench during the ceremonies and heard the 14 claimants who sued for small claims, only one of which was above $25.

Beatrice Clephane, director of the Legal Aid Bureau, said "we can now secure rights for our clients we couldn't get before." Chairman Sefton Darr of the bar association's municipal court committee hailed the new court as introducing a new era when "the popular conception of the word 'law' will be synonymous with the word 'justice.'"

In all, 17 cases were tucked away at the end of the first day's session by Clerk Milton Musser. Only one suit was filed by an attorney and claims included compensation for domestic service, for piano tuning, for rent, for sales commissions and for carpenter work.

Claims may be filed from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. weekdays and from 9 a. m. to noon Saturdays. In addition, the clerk's office will be open Wednesdays from 7:30 a. m. to 9:30 p. m. Claims will be accepted for amounts under $50.

4 Dead, 17 Hurt In 'Dust' Blasts At New Orleans

City Waterfront Rocked by Three Explosions in Grain Elevator.

By the United Press.

New Orleans, April 4.—Three explosions in rapid sequence late today rocked the public grain elevator on the uptown waterfront here killing four men and injuring 17 others working in a fourth-floor drying room for corn and wheat.

Most of the elevator's 200 employes were working in the seven-story structure at the time of the explosions and hours later, firemen wearing gas masks were searching the dust and smoke-filled building for possible victims.

Flames shot from the fourth floor with the explosions but the structure was not set afire and there was no blaze when firemen arrived.

Rene Stiegler, dock board executive agent, described the blasts as "strictly dust explosions." The elevator was constructed as a model one with latest safety devices and described as fireproof.

Trapped Slide Down Ropes.

A general fire alarm was sounded repeatedly and all ambulances in the city were summoned. Physicians and nurses rushed to the scene to give emergency treatment.

Windows in homes for blocks around the elevator were shattered and persons 100 feet away were knocked down by the explosions. Panic-stricken residents of the area rushed to the scene and added to difficulties of rescuers. Many of those trapped slid down ropes outside the huge concrete containers.

The 2,600,000-bushel elevator, described as the largest publicly owned in the world, recently had been filled to capacity by a record export movement. An embargo had been placed on incoming corn until the peak export movement had passed.

Unusual Thieves Purloin 48 Beer Mugs and Hearse

Four dozen beer mugs were at the Second Precinct station last night. Policemen R. W. Creel and B. D. Crooke, acquired the steins from two colored men they saw fleeing near Seventh and P streets northwest. The men escaped.

A small bag of silver, gold and copper ore specimens was stolen from his room at 2040 F street northwest, John Langford, Wyoming prospector, reported.

Sports equipment valued at $60 was stolen from the Central High School over the week-end, according to Hardy L. Pearce, athletic instructor.

Burglars broke into the rectory of the Sacred Heart Church, Sixteenth street and Park road northwest, and made off with $17, Rev. James A. Smythe reported.

Cold to Continue, May Delay Double Cherry Blossoms

Continuing cold weather, which is expected to bring the mercury down to 35 early this morning, threatened to postpone the blossoming date for the double-type cherry blossoms on Hains Point. They usually follow the Tidal Basin blossoms by about ten days.

Increasing cloudiness and somewhat colder weather was the official forecast of the Weather Bureau for today, with occasional rain tonight or tomorrow. Yesterday's minimum temperature of 38 was recorded shortly after 4 a. m., and the maximum of 61 at 4:30 p. m.

Juror Is Delayed And Finds Self Defendant—Guilty

Arthur M. Huntt, 421 Eleventh street northeast, arrived at Police Court yesterday as a juror and found the trial was on him.

He was found guilty of contempt of court for being two hours late. Instead of giving him the usual $3 juror's stipend, Judge Hobart Newman fined him $10.

Citizens Campaign Against Sales Tax

The citizens' committee on fair taxation yesterday began a mail campaign to members of Congress urging adoption of the proposed graduated income tax for the District instead of the sales tax urged by the Board of Trade and other business groups.

The first of a series of "bulletins" was sent to members as the House District Committee prepared to consider today the District revenue bill drafted by its sub-committee, of which Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, is chairman.

"New taxes will be collected this year in the District," the first bulletin states. "Will they be regressive or progressive taxes? The sales tax is a perfect example of a regressive tax. Further taxes which ignore the taxpayers' ability to pay are continually being proposed by those who object to bearing a fair share of the tax burden."

Boy, 4, Is Hurt in Fall From Second Story

Four-year-old Culver Edward Sullivan, 641 B street southeast, was seriously injured yesterday when he fell from a second-floor window of his home and landed on the cement steps in front of the house.

According to police, the child had been playing in the bedroom of his home when he toppled from the window unnoticed. He was taken to Casualty Hospital and treated for concussion.

2 Are Indicted For 'Abetting' Passport Fraud

Third Indictment Returned Sealed in Investigation of Rubens Case.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 4.—A Federal grand jury today indicted two men on charges of aiding and abetting in procurement of fake passports in connection with the Rubens-Robinson passport fraud investigation.

The two were Aaron Sharfin, a former employe at the Egyptian Consulate in New York, who was twice rebuked by Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe last week for refusal to answer questions, and Ossip Garber, a photographer, described by officials as the mysterious "Mr. X" in the Rubens- Robinson probe.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Arnold Rubens, of New York, disappeared in Moscow last December after obtaining passports to enter Soviet Russia on the same day that passports were obtained fraudulently through the office of former County Clerk Albert Marinelli by the mysterious "Mr. and Mrs. Donald L. Robinson" who similarly disappeared in Russia.

After repeated requests by the State Department, the Soviet government finally announced that Mrs. Rubens, the former Marie Boerger, of New York and Philadelphia, and her husband were being held for questioning.

Mrs. Rubens was identified by American newspaper correspondents as the woman who registered at a Moscow hotel under the name of "Mrs. Donald L. Robinson."

Boy of 18 Charged With Auto Death

An 18-year-old youth was held for Police Court yesterday under the negligent homicide act by a coroner's jury investigating the traffic death of Mrs. Annie Evans, 59, 3021 P street northwest.

Monroe Dixon, 18, of Takoma Park, Md., was held for the woman's death when witnesses testified Mrs. Evans was struck while crossing the street on a crosswalk at Thirty-first and P streets northwest Saturday night. Mrs. Evans succumbed in Georgetown Hospital early Sunday.

The coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death in a second inquest. The verdict absolved from blame Beal Young, colored, 37, of 1309 S street northwest, in the death of Hubert R. Newton, 30, colored, 1501 Alabama avenue southeast.

Doctor Urges U. S. Subsidies For Medicine

General Taxes for Care of Indigent and Research Are Proposed.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aril 4.—General taxation to help pay for medical care and Government subsidies for medical schools, hospitals and laboratories that "produce" medical discoveries, were dvocated today before the American College of Physicians, oneof America's powerful medical societies.

The proposals were made by John P. Peters, M. D., of Yale University, secretary of the famous "committee of 430" doctors. This committee last November upset precedent with a declaration in "the lay press" that health is a direct concern of government.

A breach which this threatened with the American Medical Association was reported healed last month when the association announced it would investigate all aspects of medical care.

"Neglect" Charged.

Dr. Peters made a distinction between practice of medicine and its "production." Practicing doctors, he maintained, no longer produce much medicine. That is done mostly by "educational and research institutes and hospitals," he said, continuing: "Meanwhile the medically productive institutions are reduced more and more to philanthropy for their funds."

"It is," said Dr. Peters, "in their complete neglect of the productive aspects of medicine that such measures as health insurance and ordinary co-operative organizations fail to meet the situation."

He declared that "governmental subsidy" is the only sound alternative yet discovered for this situation.

Wants Taxation General.

"There is no good reason to believe that Government direction would be worse than the whims and vagaries of philanthropists or the publicists and promoters who have the disposition of large funded fortunes," he said.

"It is my opinion further that the costs must eventually be collected by general taxation. Those who can pay for their own care and prefer to patronize physicians of their own choice should not escape the general tax on this account; because this will not be imposed merely to pay for personal services but for the productive work that makes those services valuable.

"It is rather amusing to reflect that at the present time most of the advances in medicine which the rich enjoy are developed in hospitals and institutions through the instrumentality of indigent patients. The fees which the rich pay, however, do not return to the support of those institutions, but go to the practitioner who is exploiting the new medical discoveries."

Size Saves Holdup Man Who Gets $2 of Roll

Newark, N. J., April 4 (AP).—The man who held up Helen Koehler, 23, accepted $2 peeled from a wad of bills and then darted away, can thank his lucky stars he's a small fellow.

Miss Koehler told police she would have screamed for help when the man pushed her into an alley and nervously asked for money but instead she held her purse above his head and took the two bills from a wad containing $22. "He was a little shrimp," she said.

White Mice Die Of Cancer Serum

By the Associated Press.

Officials of the Federal Food and Drug Administration, experimenting with serum which Dr. T. A. Neal, of Orlando, Fla., says he gave to cancer patients, asserted yesterday that white mice died less than 24 hours after receiving injections of the substance. The officials said they believed the serum used in the experiment was contaminated.

Dr. P. B. Dunbar, assistant chief of the administration, said the mice died of tetanus poisoning, showing the same symptoms as the human beings who died in Orlando.

W. G. Campbell, chief of the administration, said all known shipments of a particular batch of the serum had been recovered from physicians after this finding.

B. T. Webster, Civic Leader, Is Dead at 64

Funeral Set Tomorrow for Former President of Board of Trade.

Ben Temple Webster, former secretary and president of the Washington Board of Trade and for many years an outstanding civic leader in the Capital, died yesterday in his home at 30 West Irving street, Chevy Chase, Md.

Mr. Webster had been ill for six weeks of complications that developed from a streptococcus infection. He was stricken at Leland, Fla., February 18. Removed to his home, his condition steadily grew worse, though many blood transfusions were given.

Won Degree in 1898.

He was born in Fredonia, N. Y., the son of the late J. Erskine and Cornelia A. Webster. He was a student and teacher at the Fredonia Normal School before coming to Washington in 1894 to attend the old Spencerian Business College and the Columbian College of Law, now George Washington University. He took his law degree in 1898.

Funeral services will be conducted by the Rev. J. Hillman Hollister in the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church at 3 p. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Because of the large number of Mr. Webster's friends, it was announced, there will be no honorary pallbearers. Young employes in the office of Boss & Phelps will be the active pallbearers. They are William W. Adams, Worthington S. Houghton, Grant Boss, Everett G. Phelps, C. W. Miller, Fred J. C. Seiber, Arthur Lord and Frank Tipton.

Moved to Peoria.

Shortly after his marriage to Miss Virgil McClair Galbraith, of Washington, Mr. Webster moved to Peoria, Ill., where for several years he was western branch manager of the New York Life Insurance Co. He returned to the Capital in 1906, entering the real estate business with the firm of Moore &Hill. He became associated with Boss and Phelps a year later.

He was a member of the board of trustees of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, a former member of the board of governors of the University Club and a member of the advisory board of Riggs National Bank.

Mr. Webster was a former trustee of the Better Business Bureau, a former member of the board of directors and president of the Washington Real Estate Board. He took an active interest in the Community Chest of Washington since its beginning, heading several divisions of the group solicitation unit and establishing several records during his chairmanship. He was active as a member of the membership committee of the Board of Trade for nearly 20 years and established many records in converting citizens to membership in the organization. He served for five years as secretary of the board and for 12 years as a member of the board of directors, becoming president in 1932, at which time he led the fight for the reform of the fiscal affairs of the District in an effort to get greater participation on the part of the Federal Government.

He is survived by his wife, one son, John F. Webster, and a grandson, John Gordon Webster.

Myron Taylor, After 10 Years As No. 1 Man of Steel, Retires

By the Associated Press.

Hoboken, N. J., April 4.—[illegible] decade-long career in steel, more than half of it as America's No. 1 industrial executive, ended today for Myron C. Taylor, retiring chairman of United States Steel Corporation, at an annual meeting at which shareholders approved plans to simplify capital structure to pave the way to finance possible large-scale capital needs.

As the dignified 64-year-old lawyer-turned-steelmaster handed over the reins to Edward R. Stettinius, jr., 37, chairman of the finance committee, who tomorrow will formally succeed him as chairman of the board, he sounded a confident note on the future of the corporation.

To a gathering of shareholders estimated at a record figure of 500 Taylor said:

"The affairs of the corporation cannot be considered apart from the affairs of the Nation, but I have no doubt whatever of the ultimate future of both the Nation and the corporation."

Tracing the story of his connection with the steel giant, which has seen it pass through the worst and best years of its history, Taylor singled out one of his most controversial acts, signing a contract with a C. I. O. affiliate, to give it his implied approval. He said:

"The union has scrupulously followed the terms of its agreement and, insofar as I know, has made no unfair effort to bring other employes into its ranks, while the corporation subsidiaries, during a very difficult period, have been entirely free of labor disturbances of any kind. The cost of a strike—to the corporation, to the public and to the men—would have been incalculable."

His account to stockholders covered a 10-year record which included the retirement of $370,000,000 of direct and subsidiary funded debt to leave the corporation bond free; a $562,000,000 rehabilitation and modernization program, with $80,000,000 more appropriated but not yet spent; and a complete revamping of management policies and ranking executive personnel.

proved by stockholders included increase in authorized common stock to 15,000,000 shares from 12,500,000; authority to the board to issue at its descretion bonds, debentures and other obligations convertible into common stock; and change the common stock to no par value from $100 par.

Taylor described the changes as "precautionary," saying:

"Because of the uncertainty of the times and the desire to have the corporation put into a position where under any circumstances it would be possible to care for the corporation's interests in the best judgment of the board of directors, these steps are being taken."

for the amendment, they did not object to it.

Representative Griswold, however, said demands for exemption of the Veterans' Administration were based on fears it might be placed in the proposed Department of Welfare and "put in a test tube on a shelf."

The two concessions hitherto granted were the stipulation that the Bureau of Education is to be retained in the Interior Department instead of a possible transfer to the Welfare Department, and a provision permitting Congress to override Presidential reorganization orders within 60 days after issuance by a simple concurrent resolution not subject to Presidential veto.

The President has expressed the view that the latter provision is unconstitutional, and he was unexpectedly supported yesterday by Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), in this opinion.

Could Tie Up Action.

Wheeler said the provision was not only questionable constitutionally, but that "with the Administration's control of the chairmanships of the various committees it could easily tie a concurrent resolution up in Congress for more than 60 days."

He said both Houses should adopt a provision to keep executive orders away from Congressional committees, while debate on resolutions to override them should be limited to ten days or less.

Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, of Texas, said on the floor yesterday that the bill probably will come up today. It was possible, however, the House might not take up the controversial bill until Thursday, after the "calendar days" have passed.

Ranks of the opponents were strengthened yesterday by the desertion of Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, Administration wheelhorse of the powerful Appropriations Committee, who issued a lengthy statement condemning the section of the measure setting up a Department of Welfare.

It was recalled that Woodrum, presiding while this section passed the House overwhelmingly in a separate bill last year, voted for it at that time. While he did not explain his reversal, he declared in his statement that this section "disturbed" him considerably now. He also noted that he had often submitted his personal views to those of the President in the past, but declared he could not do so in this instance.

Hoover Cites Record.

Representative Snell yesterday read a statement from former President Herbert Hoover in Chicago, in which Hoover denied the assertion he had sought similar reorganization powers during his administration. Hoover wrote:

"If the sponsors of the bill will look up the message on reorganization that I sent to Congress in 1932, they will find it dealt with the purely executive departments of the Government. There was no attempt or suggestion to make any changes in the Civil Service or the judicial agencies, such as are contained in this Administration's bill.

"The measure is a grab for more power by the President."

Majority Leader Rayburn, in a brief radio address last night (Columbia Broadcasting System) asserted in this connection:

"It is a measure identical in language in many cases, and similar in thought and purpose, to proposals that have been advanced by practically every President for the last 40 years. It may be recalled, for example, that in the latter days of the Hoover Administration the then President notified Congress and the country that unless the powers he requested were not bestowed upon his successor there was small hope of getting a business-like handling of the national affairs."

Telegrams Condemned.

Rayburn condemned the flood of telegrams deluging both Houses, asserted the originated chiefly with the "Save-the-Constitution" organizations such as that headed by Frank Gannett, newspaper publisher and bitter New Deal foe, and said flatly: "There is no politics in the measure, no departure from the principles and policies of the Republic and no danger to any of our institutions."

Representative Bruce Barton (Republican), of New York, endeavored vainly to insert in the Congressional Record some 3,000 telegrams he said he had received against the bill and 3 in favor of it. Objections were made. Later Barton, on the radio, while scouting dictatorship charges against the measure, asserted he never would vote to abandon any of the powers of Congress to the Executive.

Representative John O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, is scheduled to explain his opposition to the reorganization bill in a 15-minute radio address from Station WMAL at 10 o'clock tonight.

500,000 Americans Crippled for Life

Half a million Americans are permanently crippled, while more more than 2,000,000 more have at some time been temporarily crippled, the Public Health Service reported yesterday, on the basis of a survey conducted in 1935-36.

Over 210,000 children under 15 are permanently crippled and 70 per cent of all crippled persons are males, the survey showed.

Permanent incapacitation is found almost three times as often among persons on relief as among families with incomes over $3,000. The report estimated that at least one and one-quarter billion work days are lost annually because of serious illness or injury.

Virginia Democrats Elect.

Virginians living in the District last night completed organization of the Virginia Democratic Club of Washington. A. M. Beech, General Accounting Office employe, was elected treasurer. Members previously chose Robert E. Pugh, president; W. Calke Booton, vice president, and J. S. Eddiss, secretary.

This report has not yet been made public, but it is understood to offer little of immediate relief to the railroads. That understanding was supported by the attitude taken yesterday by Pelley in discussing the position of the railroads. Although present at the White House, he declined to discuss what happened there.

Aside from the White House conference, Pelley said the position of the railroad executives was that there were only two possible solutions to the immediate problem facing the carriers. One, he said, was an increase in railroad income, either through increased rates or increased volume of traffic. The other, he asserted, was a reduction in operating expenses of the railroads.

Pelley indicated he believed the prospects for increased revenue in the near future were slight. He pointed out that the I. C. C. had given the roads only a part of the rate increases they had requested. He also pointed out that for the first time since February, 1921, the Class I railroads of this country last February had an operating deficit; that is, their income was not sufficient to pay operating expenses.

Need Immediate Aid.

On the side of reducing operating expenses, Pelley emphasized that consolidations if they could be effected would be helpful but that such undertakings would take time, whereas the railroads need immediate help. He said that wages represented 40 per cent of the operating expenses and consequently a cut in wages was the only way to reduce operating costs quickly.

Pelley did not name any figure as desirable for a reduction in wages, explaining that was a matter to be taken up with railway labor when discussions are resumed in the near future. He said the discussions had been shelved several weeks ago to await recommendations of the President for a solution of the entire railroad problem. The managements were willing to wait a reasonable time on the President, he said.

A reduction of 15 per cent in all railway wage scales has been mentioned, but it is believed that the railroads would be satisfied if labor would agree to cancellation of the wage increases granted last October which averaged around 7 per cent and cost the carriers in the neighborhood of $134,000,000 annually.

Pelley doubted the feasibility of more Reconstruction Finance Corporation loans to keep weak railroads from receivership and to permit the stronger ones to make improvements and purchase equipment. He said RFC loans to the railroads and proposed moratoriums on interest payments on railroad bonds only had the effect of piling up debt for the carriers and prolonging their economic agony. In the long run he thought it would be better to let the weak roads go into receivership now than later on, if they could not be made self-supporting.

Boiled down, Pelley's view was that the time had come when the railroads should be placed on a self-supporting basis, either through a further increase in freight rates or by being permitted to reduce wage scales along with other economies.

Although the President has taken a stand against wage reductions, the essence of Pelley's view is held by certain figures within the Administration. The President, for instance, indicated several times in recent months that he believed the railroads were entitled to the rate boosts they requested.

I. C. C. Is Obstacle.

But the I. C. C. now is the obstacle to approaching the problem from that direction, even though last October that agency asserted that "the net earnings of the railroads are now inconsistent, in general, not only with constitutional standards as to the rights of private owners, but also with the conditions necessary for the proper conduct of the public service of railroad transportation by private enterprise."

In making that statement the I. C. C. did not take into consideration the wage increases granted shortly before. Since that statement was made railroad earnings have shrunk to the vanishing point.

The Splawn-Eastman-Mahaffie report, submitted to the President almost two weeks ago, is understood to contain these recommendations:

Establishment of a transportation board or authority, comprising three members, charged with the duty of co-ordinating transportation and eliminating undue competition.

Amendment of the present law to relieve the I. C. C. of the responsibility of certifying that railroads are not in need of reorganization to be eligible for RFC loans.

A program of RFC loans to railroads for improvements and equipment purchases, especially to the stronger carriers as a means of stimulating employment.

Amendment of the bankruptcy act to facilitate the reorganization of railroads in receivership.

The proposed transportation authority would first have the duty of determining what economies through co-ordination and consolidation in railroad operation could be effected by co-operative action on the part of the carriers, recommending their conclusions for ICC action.

Whether the three-man report proposed that the ICC be given authority to compel co-ordination and consolidation plans was not known, but it is known that Eastman several weeks ago made such a suggestion to the President. In that report he recommended that the ICC be given "reserve powers," for use if efforts at co-operative action failed, as follows:

"Grant power to approve, on petition of the Transportation Board, any consolidation which will promote public interest.

"Grant power to compel, if necessary. Consolidations to be effected by exchange of securities without use of cash.

"Grant power to approve and, if necessary, compel co-ordinations, upon petition of Transportation Board, barring operation of anti-trust statutes.

"Labor to be cared for as per agreement of May, 1936."

Eastman, however, would place the emphasis on co-operation rather than compulsion in effecting co-ordination and consolidation.

The proposal to modify the present requirements for ICC approval for RFC loans to the railroads may meet opposition on Capitol Hill. For instance, the Senate last week inserted into the Glass industrial loans bill that the present requirements must be observed if any loans to railroads are made under the new legislation. The House eliminated that provision in passing the bill yesterday. It is significant that the amendment originated with Senator Burton K. Wheeler, chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

At present the ICC is required to approve all RFC loans to railroads and in doing so must certify that the borrowing carrier is not in need of reorganization. In the present condition of the railroads, the ICC has found it increasingly difficult to make such a finding and wishes to be relieved of that requirement. Under the proposed change, loans could be made to railroads offering for the loan collateral regarded as adequate by the RFC.

The proposal designed to speed up reorganization of railroads in receivership is aimed chiefly at the present veto power of minority security holders over reorganization plans. The present procedure frequently has been criticized as interminably slow.

Those attending the White House conference yesterday, in addition to Pelley and Harrison, were F. E. Williamson, of the New York Central; S. T. Bledsoe, of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, and Ernest E. Norris, of the Southern Railway, representing management; D. B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Firemen and Engineers; E. J. Manion, president of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, and S. H. Hogan, president of the Marine Engineers, representing labor.

Green Asks U. S. Control.

Chicago, April 4 (AP).—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, declared today that Government ownership of railroads was the only solution to the "serious transportation problem."

ing in the numbers game. Efforts to trap the gang's so-called bigshots have failed over a period of years. The income tax investigation was decided upon after police were unable to secure sufficient gambling evidence to warrant prosecution.

The indictment charges the brothers with failure to report approximately $164,000 in "net profits" over a period of three years.

This, according to the indictment, left them owing the Government $28,249.31 for the years 1934, 1935 and 1936.

Sadur is a certified public accountant and head of Salid & Co., in the Investment Building. It was charged he "advised, counseled and represented" the Warrings on their income taxes during the years in question. Sadur was admitted to practice in tax matters before the Treasury Department in 1922.

Sherr, the indictment read, "aided and assisted" in the alleged evasions.

The income investigation first covered the year 1934. At that time, said Wilson, Emmett Warring had sole control of the brothers' gaming activities. In his income tax report for that year, records show, Emmett listed his occupation as "gaming business." He reported a profit for that year of $10,685.28. But the Government contends his net income for 1934 was $29,166.57.

Although the other brothers were reported not to have had taxable incomes during that year, they are accused of conspiring with Emmett to conceal his true income.

The following year, according to results of the investigation, the brothers formed a partnership as "commission brokers." They reported to the Internal Revenue Bureau individual and identical net incomes of $1,868.84.

The indictment charges, however, that the "numbers" racket yielded a net profit of $83,753.15 during 1935 and their indivdiual returns should have been $27,917.72 each.

In a partnership return for 1936 the Warring incomes showed a sudden increase. In that year they reported a net profit of $57,524.56. Again the Government charged they underestimated and actually made $124,689.40.

Records show that Emmett paid a tax of $656.53 in 1934, but should have paid $3,754.98. Emmett and Charles, according to Government figures, each paid $27.28 in taxes for 1935, while Leo claimed certain exemptions and paid nothing. Each owes more than $3,000 for that year, the indictments charge.

Although the brothers each paid $1,734.38 in income tax for 1936, the figure should have been approximately $7,000, the Government claims.

In their efforts to conceal "earnings," the indictment reported, the Warrings "kept and maintained false and inaccurate records of said gambling business." A total of 19 overt acts of conspiracy were appended to the bill.

The indictment, climax of many months of investigation by Wilson, Elmer L. Irey, chief of the intelligence unit, Internal Revenue Bureau, and John R. Cox, chief agent of the Washington office, was said to be the first case of its kind brought in the Capital. Such cases are usually prosecuted in Baltimore where District income matters are handled.

The new and drastic "numbers" bill, now awaiting signature of the President, will greatly increase the powers of the local police to cope with the widespread and thriving racket, authorities pointed out last night.

Emmett Warring's police record shows only arrests for minor offenses. Leo also has been arrested on numerous occasions. Charles—better known as "Rags"—is now serving a jail term in Atlanta in connection with a recent "hijacking" shooting here.

Deserter Held In 2 Women's Torture Deaths

they abandoned it near Balmorhea, 50 miles from here. A $1,000 reward was offered.

A man's handkerchief, grasped by Miss Frome, a few strands of hair and a pack of matches were other clews. The hair was sent to Austin for analysis. There were fingerprints on the Packard but officers said so many persons had touched the car it was impossible to get satisfactory prints.

Weston Frome, who flew here from Berkeley, where he is assistant sales manager of the Atlas Powder Co., said the women carried about $150.

In El Paso an autopsy revealed that Mrs. Frome had not been criminally attacked and that her daughter probably had not been violated.

Roy D. Chitwood, special investigator for the District Attorney's office, said further tests would be made to determine whether there was a criminal attack, as at first believed.

Torture a Mystery.

"There are so many angles to this and we have so little to go on," Chitwood said. "We're sure the women were killed Wednesday afternoon when James Milam saw their car and a black coupe on the highway near here. But we haven't any idea why the murderer tortured the women, why he stripped them of their clothes, and why he beat them so unmercifully."

It was known that one of the Packard's tires blew out and police believed the murderer made the acquaintance of the women when he stopped to help them. Their own tools, unused, were found in car.

Roy Jackson, El Paso district attorney, said that after the tire was changed the man probably drew a gun, got into the car and ordered Mrs. Frome and her daughter to drive down the lonely side road into the mesquite.

Signs of Battle.

"The woman with the murderer followed in his car, as we see it, and probably sat by while the women lasted also was problematical. "A truck driver saw the cars driven off the main highway, but he says he's seen many strange things around here, and he didn't investigate. Tracks leading away from the road indicate the women made a furious effort to battle the man in the car, for the big sedan apparently ran wild for several hundred yards. Apparently in the fight no one drove."

How long the agonies of the women lasted als owas problematical, but before they were beaten senseless they were burned on the hands with a cigar or cigaret. Flesh was torn from Mrs. Frome's forearm as though she had been bitten. Someone jumped up and down on the prostrate Miss Frome. In her agony she clutched the sandy soil until her fingers bled, and somehow she grasped the handkerchief and the matches.

Then the women were killed with revolver bullets. One was shot with a .38 and the other with a .32. This added to the confusion and police were uncertain whether it indicated there were two highwaymen or that the murderer carried two guns.

The Packard was found later in a ditch near Balmorhea, 50 miles east of Van Horn on the main route to Austin and other East Texas cities.

Navy Chief Asks Battleships of 45,000 Tons

Defense

Roosevelt would ask Congress for an appropriation to start construction immediately on two battleships as soon as the authorization bill is approved. This would give the United States six battleships on the ways, including the North Carolina and Washington already under construction, and the two appropriated for in the 1939 Navy supply bill.

Leahy said he saw no imminent danger of the United States becoming engaged in war, and reiterated emphatically this country has no understanding or agreement with Great Britain for "pooling" of sea power.

He said the United States has no naval problem in the Orient at present and does not anticipate any so long as Japan confines her activities to the Asiatic Continent.

He reiterated his testimony before the House Naval Affairs Committee that the American fleet could not withstand attack by the combined fleets of Japan, Germany and Italy.

Tokyo, April 5 (Tuesday) (AP).—Japanese newspapers virtually were unanimous today in interpreting Hull's objection to setting a limit on United States naval activity as signifying America's intention of building the world's largest navy to attack Japan.

Hull's letter to the Senate Naval Affairs Committee opposing a stay-at-home policy for the American Navy apparently capped mounting Japanese apprehension.

The Princeton Club of Washington presents the Princeton University Glee Club, directed by James Giddings, in the Shoreham Hotel ballroom Monday night. Program: "Brothers, Sing On" (Grieg), Five Choruses (Edward MacDowell), "Tarantella" (Randall Thompson), "Simon Legree" (Douglas Moore), "David Jazz" (Joseph Wagner), Choruses from "H. M. S. Pinafore" (Sullivan), Princeton Songs.

Refreshingly different from the usual collegiate selection of songs was the program offered last evening by the Princeton University Glee Club in the Shoreham Hotel. Director James Giddings had the commendable idea of devoting the larger part of the concert to American composers, compressing "H. M. S. Pinafore" into eight numbers for men's voices, and closing with a salute of Princeton songs. Even the opening song by Grieg was not the time-honored "Landsighting," but the more appropriate "Brothers, Sing On."

Edward MacDowell wrote about a score of songs for male chorus, and most of them are continually overlooked by directors. Two of the best, "Dance of the Gnomes" and "A Ballad of Charles the Bold," the one an effectively frolicsome fantasy and the other a sturdy and dramatic narrative, were pleasantly intoned by the visitors, and with them were grouped "Winter Wraps Its Grimmest Spell," "The Collier Lassie" and "Hush, Hush." This tribute to MacDowell was an innovation which one would like to see copied by other choral organizations.

Contemporary American composers to the number of three were represented in the following group. Randall Thompson's "Tarantella," a setting of a poem by Hilaire Belloc, is a work interesting by its rythmic vitality, its harmonic surprises, and its excellent part-writing. It would have been heard to better advantage with accompaniment of a small orchestra, for the piano does not do justice to the tonal coloring.

Vachel Lindsay's "Simon Legree" found a sympathetic composer in Douglas Moore, whose music catches the spirit of the poem, underlines its boisterous and somewhat grim humor, and preserves its folk character. The "David Jazz" of Joseph Wagner, while not as good as the "Daniel Jazz," is a successful piece of its kind.

From Gilbert and Sullivan's satire on the British admiralty, the singers presented "We Sail the Ocean Blue," "Gaily Tripping," "I Am the Monarch of the Seas" and other selections sufficient to outline the plot.

Blum Places Fate in Hands Of Parliament

proposals would permit foreign exchange control, impose an "extraordinary tax" on capital holdings, and call a two-year moratorium on public debt payments.

The first party group to act on the proposals was the radical-Socialists who voted 28 to 22 to support the program. But the small majority and the fact that eight of those who voted for support were cabinet members showed that Blum faced serious difficulty in getting even the chamber's approval.

Senators, angrily stalking the corridors of Luxembourg Palace, predicted the cabinet would fall if the premier insisted upon bringing his program to a vote in the upper house.

Blum's proposals met opposition in the cabinet, but were approved without difficulty. Edouard Daladier, minister of national defense, said he opposed the capital tax which Blum estimated would bring in 20,000,000,000 francs (about $600,000,000) within ten years.

Many deputies and senators said the government's program was "simply a copy of the economy practiced in Italy and Germany."

Blum in reply told the chamber finance committee that the nation's finances were in such a state and the costs of rearmament were so heavy that the nation must be disciplined to accept drastic measures. The treasury needs to raise 36,700,000,000 francs (about $1,101,000,000) this year aside from refinancing of maturing bonds.

The premier said his proposals should not be taken to mean that there certainly would be exchange control, but rather that the Bank of France merely would be empowered to control exchange in case of necessity.

He reminded the deputies of the dangers of the international situation. French war fears were evidenced by almost daily meetings between Foreign Minister Joseph Paul-Boncour and the French ambassadors to Soviet Russia, Germany, Rumania, Poland and Czechoslovakia, all of whom are in Paris.

The cost of France's part in the world arms race for 1938 would be 46 per cent of the total receipts, said a spokesman for the premier, while the gold stock in the Bank of France already is reduced to an amount considered a minimum reserve in case of war.

The text of the bill, to be submitted to the chamber tomorrow, consists of only two paragraphs.

The first would give the government powers until July 1, 1938, to take by decree any action considered necessary to meet the needs of national defense, protect the Bank of France's gold and "rebuild the nation's finances and economy."

The second states all such decrees must be submitted to Parliament for ratification by December 31.

Cattle Moving Banned Throughout Britain

London, April 4 (U.P.).—The Ministry of Agriculture tonight banned movement of cattle throughout England with the exception of six counties as the result of nine scattered outbreaks of hoof and mouth disease.

The standstill order was the biggest ever issued in Britain. Farmers discussed a rumor that sabotage by foreign agents may be responsible since the outbreaks have occurred at an unusual time of the year.

Two Trainloads Of Women Ask Arms for Spain

1,500 From N. Y. Parade to State Department and Capitol.

Pleading for repeal of the embargo on shipment of arms to Spain, 1,500 Spanish-American women yesterday traveled 200 miles to place their views before Congress and the State Department.

After arrival at Union Station in two special trains, the demonstrators, most of whom live in New York City's uptown "Little Spain," marched to the State Department, waving anti-Fascist placards.

Police halted the contingent in the park adjacent to the south lawn of the White House and permitted a delegation to enter the State Department to confer with Assistant Secretary George S. Messersmith.

March on Capitol.

A petition "urging our Government to revoke the embargo against the democratically elected government of Spain" was presented to Messersmith by Representative John T. Bernard (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota; Mrs. Jerry O'Connell, wife of the Montana Representative; Ernestina Gonzales, former director of the Madrid University library, and Josephine Herbst, novelist.

After picnic lunches in the park and a report from the delegation, the women marched on Capitol Hill.

Most of the demonstrators made themselves comfortable on the Capitol steps while their leaders, issuing orders in Spanish and English, dispatched small groups to call on members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Another Delegation Due.

A dozen Capitol police circulated among the women as they rested on the steps.

Another delegation visiting Washington on behalf of the loyalist cause will be received this morning by John L. Lewis, C. I. O. chairman. Members of the group are Ramon Sender, soldier novelist; Jose Bergamin, Catholic editor; Carmen Meana, Madrid social worker, and Ojier Preteceille, representing the Spanish General Union of Workers.

Blackshirts Rout Enemy Italians In Loyalist Army

Rome, April 4 (AP).—The Fascist press, which has been hailing the current insurgent offensive in Eastern Spain as a Blackshirt triumph, exulted today over reports from Salamanca that Italian Fascists had "destroyed" the Garibaldi and Matteoti divisions of Italian anti-Fascists fighting for the Spanish government.

The newspaper La Tribuna wrote:

"War's justice has struck inexorably at these fugitives who, torn away from the thousand-year-old trunk of the great mother as Bolshevist mercenaries, dared to raise arms against civilization which once more in history fights and conquers in the name of Rome."

Premier Mussolini's Il Popolo D'Italia of Milan devoted half of its front page to a dispatch describing the victorious drive of Italian legionnaires with the Spanish insurgents down the Ebro Valley to the Mediterranean.

James Carew Dies; Wed Ellen Terry

London, April 4 (AP).—James Carew, 62, American actor and third husband of the late Ellen Terry, died here today.

Mr. Carew was born in Goshen, Ind., and first appeared on the stage at Chicago's Irving Theater as Dionysius in "Damon and Pythias" in 1897.

He came to London in 1905. Returning to the United States two years later, he and Miss Terry wree married at Pittsburgh in 1907.

They appeared together in a number of productions in the United States and England. He lived in London following his retirement in 1936.

Insurgents Cut Spain in Two; Loyalist Officials Take Flight

Spain

Italy, from bringing about a whirlwind finish to the civil war, the United Press reported.

[Along a 165-mile front the government's troops were reported scattering in panic, opening the way for Franco's final blow, and the same terror spread through the loyalist civilian populations who had withstood merciless bombardments from land, sky and sea in the war which has taken an estimated 800,000 lives.

[The threat of anarchism appeared in the City of Barcelona and the government of Premier Juan Negrin took stern measures to cope with any disorders stirred by extremist elements determined to leave only the ruined hulk of a city to the invaders.

[At Perpignan, France, Gen. Pablo Martinez, Spanish government commander, assigned to the Benasque sector of the Pyrenees, said anarchists were complicating government defense efforts in Catalonia by burning and dynamiting buildings.

[He said dissension caused by anarchists in the government ranks had been partly responsible for insurgent victories.

[Scores of officials and prominent loyalists were reported fleeing northward from the threatened Catalonian capital, toward the safety of French soil, when it became apparent that loyalist resistance was crumbling outside Tortosa.

[Premier Negrin, summoning an emergency session of his cabinet in Barcelona tonight, took personal command of the government's armed resistance and reduced War Minister Indalecio Prieto to the rank of minister without portfolio.

[The Barcelona government, angrily refusing to consider any surrender in the face of defeat, called up 100,000 untrained reserves—mostly workers in Catalonia's war industries—and threw them into the gaps on the front with orders to "resist to the last cartridge."

[Aguirre headed for Paris, announcing that he would begin negotiations with Great Britain for the evacuation of nearly 200,000 Basques among the 1,000,000 refugees in the path of Franco's Catalonian armies.

[Other prominent loyalists fleeing across the frontier included Marcelino Domingo and Manuel Portela, who announced that Premier Negrin and Minister Indalecio Prieto had decided on a "fight to the death," although they realize that the odds are hopeless.

[The F. A. I. (Iberian Anarchists Federation) and other left wing extremists in Barcelona were said to be taking advantage of the swelling panic to demand greater power in the government.

[It was indicated that the government might be opened to the extremists, including Anarchists, Trotskyists and Socialists on a pledge of a fight to the finish.—Editor's note].

In sight of the Mediterranean on the south and touching the French border on the north, the insurgent armies tonight began closing the jaws of a giant trap about Catalonia.

While the center columns swept past conquered Lerida for a frontal attack on the strongest line of Catalan defenses, other corps on a widely extended flank pursued fleeing government troops toward the sea and toward the Pyrenees.

Gen. Jose Moscardo's troops in the far north took village after village.

But it was Gen. Juan Yague's hard-fighting columns in the center of the long line that were trying to deal a death blow to the government militiamen entrenched behind strong fortifications on a 22-mile line east of Lerida from Balaguer to Borjas Blancas.

Military obserers have said the decisive battle of the Catalonian campaign would be fought along that line. The government's desperate defense of Lerida was mainly to allow time to strengthen the Balaguer-Borjas fortifications.

From Lerida Gen. Yague's troops split into three columns. One drove due east on the road to Barcelona, 80 miles away. Another struck out to the northeast on the road to the French frontier. The third moved to the southeast on the road to Tarragona. The government line covers all three roads.

Northeast of Madrid on the Guadalajara front the government reported new successes in a counter-offensive designed to relieve Catalonia by forcing Gen. Franco to divert some of his troops to central Spain.

Dispatches from Madrid placed the toll of Sunday's artillery bombardment of the former capital at 50 dead and 200 injured. It was said to have been the worst shelling Madrid had suffered since the war started.)

More than 5,000 militiamen and civilians, who had fled from Catalonia to France since Friday, were repatriated to Spain. All except 258 were sent back to Catalonia.

Commons Bars Election Over Foreign Policy

Laborite Slaps Foe in Hot Debate; Premier Called 'Undertaker.'

By the Associated Press.

London, April 4.—The government in an agry debate in the House of Commons rejected tonight the Labor Party's call to submit British foreign policy to the electorate.

Prime Minister Chamberlain, charging Labor's foreign policy was "both futile and dangerous" and would lead "inevitably to war," declared:

"This is no time to disturb the country by a general election when it is in the throes of its armaments program."

The House was thrown into an uproar earlier when 54-year-old Emanuel Shinwell, a Laborite, slapped the face of a husky conservative, Commander Robert Tatton Bower.

Slap Follows Retort.

The incident was precipitated during Shinwell's persistent attempt to question the government on the status of the Duke of Alba, Spanish insurgent agent in London, whom Laborites complained had been given diplomatic status.

Bower interrupted with a remark which seemed to be: "Go to Poland." The slapping followed.

The Conservative folded his hands and refused to budge when the infuriated Shinwell, who defeated the late Ramsay MacDonald in the 1935 general election, urged him to go outside and fight.

Censure Move Defeated.

Cabinet members shouted "Get out" to the Laborite but apologies were made.

The foreign affairs debate—the thirteenth in nine weeks—was provoked by a motion of censure in which labor demanded a general election on the Government's foreign policy.

The House rejected the motion by a vote of 359 to 152.

Earlier, referring derisively to the labor motion, Chamberlain declared the opposition members "may be thankful they are going to get off with a sound beating tonight and will not yet have to suffer an even more resounding defeat in the country."

Called "Undertaker."

The prime minister said the government's foreign policy had won "approval not only of the country, but also of practically the whole world, with the possible exception of Russia."

Laborite Arthur Greenwood, who opened the debate, charged:

"Liberty in Europe is being murdered. The prime minister quite suitably is the undertaker, waiting to bury the corpse. Sacrifice of liberty is not the way to peace."

He declared there was ample evidence Italy had broken engagements since Anglo-Italian friendship pact discussions began by sending aid to the Spanish insurgents.

Mexican Court Asked to Enjoin Seizures of Oil

U. S. and British Concerns Open Legal Drive to Recover Property.

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, April 4.—The foreign petroleum industry today launched the first legal effort of a three-way drive to recover its $400,000,000 properties expropriated by the government.

The 17 American and British companies opened their fight by petitioning the district court for an injunction against enforcement of President Cardenas' March 19 expropriation decree.

Officials of the companies said their next steps would follow tomorrow. These would include an appeal to the district court against termination of labor contracts with their 18,000 workers and a request to the department of national economy for administrative revocation of Cardenas' decree.

It was considered unlikely the lower court would grant the injunction. In that case the companies were expected to appeal to the highest tribunal.

The government, meanwhile, went ahead with a canvass of the world market to find an outlet for the nation's huge stores of petroleum.

The newspaper Nacion, commenting editorially on Washington's attitude of conciliation in the oil conflict, said this meant "a new dawn over the two democracies."

The newspaper Excelsior suggested "what ought to be arranged now—since the policy of the good neighbor suffered no failure—is the silver question."

(Excelsior's reference was to the United States decision to suspend silver purchases from Mexico.)

The Warring Indictments.

Indictment of the Warring brothers on charges of conspiracy to defraud the Government of over $28,000 in income taxes will arouse varying reactions. The grand jury bases its case against the Warrings on profits from the numbers racket said to have reached nearly a quarter of a million in three years. But they are not charged with violating the District's gambling laws. Indeed, the indictment notes that none of the three has been convicted of lottery or gaming charges, although Charles Warring is serving a prison term for another offense. The charges brought by the grand jury are merely that the Warrings failed to pay all the taxes they owe the Government.

The indictment thus illustrates once more the pitiful weakness of the District anti-gambling law. These defendants are accused of conspiring to evade the payment of income taxes on enormous profits from an illegal business. The Department of Justice is to be congratulated on striking this indirect blow at gambling in the District. Similar tactics put Al Capone behind the bars. But that good work does not excuse the weakness of the direct attack on lawlessness.

Fortunately, both houses of Congress have now passed the anti-numbers racket bill, and it awaits only the President's signature to make it effective. Even this legislation may not result in conviction of the "big shots." There are many indications, however, that Washington will no longer be so excessively hospitable to czars of the numbers racket.

In one other respect the Warring indictments should have a salutary influence. Those who fling money away by betting on "the numbers" now have a better idea of the huge profits which they toss into the pockets of law violators. The swindling aspects of the "game" should become a substantial aid to the police in stamping it out.

Evidence given to investigators in this case cannot be used against the defendants in any other connection. For that reason comment as to the Warrings' alleged claim of tax exemption for "payment of large sums" to obtain immunity from prosecution may be withheld. But such charges cannot be overlooked by the Police Department. As a precautionary measure Maj. Brown will doubtless make every effort to probe to the bottom of this allegation.

Good Riddance.

In response to protests from both Secretary Hull and Secretary Wallace the Senate Finance Committee last week struck from the House tax bill certain excise levies imposed on imported pork products. It has also rejected a proposal to levy a similar duty on imported canned beef.

The pork excise was put in the tax bill by an amendment from the floor of the House at the instigation of a small but interested group. It was not a revenue measure. Its sole purpose was to afford increased protection to domestic producers. The elimination of these excise levies, therefore, will have little effect upon tax receipts.

In thus hastily and ignorantly indorsing a change in tariff schedules without consulting the Trade Agreements Section of the State Department, without seeking information from the Tariff Commission or making a preliminary investigation on its own account, the House demonstrated a really amazing disregard of its legislative responsibilities. Such conduct is certainly far from reassuring to countries with which we have either concluded or plan later on to negotiate trade agreements.

Even countries not directly affected by the proposed pork levy may well doubt the wisdom of concluding trade treaties with the United States if our accredited representatives can offer them no assurances against legislative nullification of their commitments. For that reason it is most important for Congress to refrain scrupulously from tampering with tariff schedules except after due notice and consultation with the administrative agencies concerned with tariff making.

In the present instance the House did not even have the excuse of a pressing emergency to offer in justification for its action. For, while the volume of imported pork products has unquestionably increased greatly during the past two years, total imports still constitute only a negligible percentage of domestic production. Moreover, the recent rise has been the result of droughts, the effects of which in stimulating purchases abroad are only temporary. Normally the United States can produce pork more cheaply than other countries. Our producers would be wise, therefore, to concentrate upon ways and means of expanding their export outlets instead of trying to shut out of this market the limited supplies that have been coming this way.

China's Growing Nationalism.

Before adjourning its sessions at Hankow the extraordinary congress of the Chinese Nationalist Party bestowed upon Chiang Kai-shek the suspiciously imitative title of Tsung Tsai, which is translated as "Leader." This was accompanied by an apparent enlargement in the powers of the generalissimo.

At first glance the development suggests that China is moving along the popular road toward one-man dictatorship. And there is no doubt that under the stress of war the government has found it necessary to strengthen and enlarge the power of the executive. This centralization of power, however, is not yet comparable with that seen in Western nations. Provincialism and local autonomy are deeply-rooted Chinese characteristics and it has taken the present Japanese invasion to make the people as a whole even dimly conscious of having any relationship to the central government.

Moreover, while considerable authority has been placed in the hands of Gen. Chiang, this authority is by no means unlimited. On the contrary, while the generalissimo is authorized to veto decisions of the central executive committee, the final say remains with the committee which represents the full membership of the party. This, in turn, represents the most considerable political force in China.

It is also interesting to note that last week's party congress broadened the base of government by permitting representation of other than Kuomintang (Nationalist Party) elements, and decreed that, within the limits permissible in time of war, freedom of speech, press and association is to be unhampered. At the same time the late Dr. Sun Yat-sen's Three Peoples' Principles, which envisage for China a middle road between democracy and socialism, were declared to be the basic precepts of the Chinese political system.

Therefore it can properly be argued that far from moving in the direction of totalitarianism China is actually heading toward more effective democracy, which involves a strong sense of national unity as its prerequisite. Nor would such a development seem strange in view of existing circumstances. Never before in Chinese history have the people of the republic, regardless of class or political viewpoint, been as united as they are now. Nationalists, Communists, North and South, coolies and bankers—men of all parties and none—have, under Chiang's able leadership, subordinated their special interests to make possible a successful prosecution of the war.

The result of this developing unity and patriotism is manifested in China's increasing confidence as to the eventual outcome of the war. After more than eight months of conflict the predicted walkover for the Japanese has disappeared from the picture. There is on the contrary a growing possibility that the substantial victory at first taken for granted in Tokyo will never be achieved.

A Question For The House.

As a result of the controversy in the House over the Government reorganization bill, that body is in a position to pass any sort of measure it may desire. The President has raised no objections to amendments agreed upon by House leaders. It is not improbable that other changes may be written into the bill without provoking vigorous opposition from the White House.

The House has courageously asserted its independence, and won. In some quarters that victory may be taken as the signal for a new drive to destroy the bill with amendments. That, of course, would be unfortunate. In wrenching itself free from Administration dominance the House has enhanced, rather than decreased, its own responsibility. Credit or blame for the type of reorganization bill that is now turned out will go largely to the two houses of Congress.

Special attention ought to be given, therefore, to the proposed amendment permitting Congress to override executive reorganization orders by concurrent resolution. The purpose of this change—to give a simple majority in Congress the last word in reorganization free from the Presidential veto power—is in many ways commendable. But President Roosevelt has raised a very serious question as to its constitutionality.

Concurrent resolutions are, as the President noted in his letter to the unknown correspondent, merely expressions of Congressional sentiment. Congress cannot legislate by this method. A law requires the signature of the Chief Executive. If the final reorganization bill should attempt to give concurrent resolutions the force of law, the President might challenge it in a test case. There are many reasons to believe that the Supreme Court would uphold him.

The constitutionality of the proposed procedure is not made less questionable by the President's decision not to oppose the House leaders' concessions. It is up to the House to ask itself whether this so-called concession is not merely an illusion. If that body wishes to be certain that it can defeat any organizational change that may be effected by the President, it should devise a better plan than this.

For the sake of demonstrating its capacity for intelligent legislation, as well as for improvement of the bill at hand, many friends of the House hope that it will make another attempt to solve the problem of reorganization control by a simple majority.

Time Is Of The Essence.

In his radio address on Sunday night Senator Harrison stated that the Finance Committee had "translated the House proposal into what I confidently believe will be a business recovery bill."

Then he added: "The highest duty of men in public life today is to adopt courageously policies that will dispel fear and restore confidence. That is what the Finance Committee has attempted to do."

For months it has been apparent that at least a large proportion of the members of this Congress desire constructive revision of projected tax legislation as the first step in a program of effectively fighting depression and encouraging recovery. It is therefore to be regretted that the courageous report of the Senate Committee could not have been more prompt. However, now that both committees have considered the Treasury program, and the various amendments proposed, it is to be hoped that some appreciation of the importance of time will be apparent.

On the whole, the modifications proposed by the Senate Finance Committee should be acceptable. Undistributed profits taxation has worked serious hardship, especially to rapidly growing businesses, large or small. Abuses, as demonstrated, can be dealt with as abuses reachable under the amendment to the law against undue building up of unnecessary surpluses. Such procedure is obviously more practical than general legislation affecting earnings kept for legitimate expansion as well as earnings kept back for tax avoidance purposes.

The Senate Committee is opposed, and rightly, to complicating this measure by processing-tax amendments. This proposal brings in a new field of discussion. As Senator Harrison says, it would mean further delay at the psychological moment. Promptness in disposing of tax reform is now urgently in the public interest.

Tools Of The Criminal.

Indiscriminate sale of firearms has long been recognized as one prominent cause of the relatively high crime rate in the United States. Criminals have little or no difficulty in securing the tools of their trade. The States have found it impossible fully to control the flow of arms into illicit channels. Unless Congress also does its part to curb this traffic, efforts to reduce our annual toll of about 12,000 homicides and an appalling loss from armed robbery will be seriously handicapped.

In 1934 Congress passed an act requiring the registration of machine guns, submachine guns, sawed-off shotguns and rifles, and silencers for any type of weapon. The Department of Justice is now urging extension of that measure to pistols, revolvers and gas guns. A bill introduced by Representative Doughton, at the request of Attorney General Cummings, would impose taxes on manufacturers and importers of these small arms and on dealers and pawnbrokers handling them. The transfer of such weapons would also be taxed at the rate of $1.

Every sale of pistol, revolver or gas gun would have to be made by written order. In connection with such orders the purchasers would have to identify themselves by means of a photograph and fingerprints. The weapon would likewise be identified. Should it thereafter fall into the hands of the police in connection with any crime, the owner would immediately be indicated.

All persons possessing small firearms would be required to register them with the collector of internal revenue within six months. No fingerprints would be required with such registration. It would be a simple procedure for law-abiding citizens but highly dangerous for mobsters. Of course, this measure would not immediately deprive criminals of their lethal weapons. If caught with an unregistered small arm, however, they would face a fine or jail sentence.

The usual opposition to this proposal will doubtless be heard. Sponsors of the bill will be accused of trying to deprive peaceful citizens of the means of protection and of making it difficult to secure arms for sporting purposes. These arguments are not effective, however, when it is realized that any person could obtain a pistol for lawful purposes and that the measure does not apply to ordinary shotguns and rifles. Moreover, any trifling inconvenience to individuals seems unimportant beside the effect the proposal may have in discouraging crime.

The War On Syphilis.

From the Louisville Courier-Journal.

The proposal that the Federal Government spend $271,000,000 in the next 13 years, or slightly more than $20,000,000 a year, to help States stamp out syphilis and other venereal diseases must not be overlooked by the public. With the co-operation of the Federal Government and the States the war on syphilis can be won. According to Surgeon General Thomas Parran, a standard of treatment has been evolved in the United States which is "superior to any other in the world," but lack of funds prevents its widespread availability.

The measure now before the Senate and sponsored by Senator La Follette is the answer to the appeal of the National Conference on Venereal Diseases which met last year. That body asked Congress to appropriate $25,000,000 for the war on syphilis, the Federal funds to be matched by States and localities. "This amount," writes Dr. Parran in his book, "Shadow on the Land," compares with $246,000,000 of State and Federal funds used for bovine tuberculosis since 1917," but the La Follette measure reduces it approximately $5,000,000.

If bovine tuberculosis is to be eradicated, syphilis, too, must be eradicated. From a purely material standpoint its cost is inestimable. Crime and insanity due to it fill jails, prisons and asylums.

Symposium On Spain

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I desire to express my grateful appreciation of the article you recently published by former Ambassador Laughlin concerning the situation in Spain. He has admirably clarified in my opinion, the whole issue which I fear has been needlessly obscured because of the fact that Mussolini and Hitler have been supporting the Franco regime.

So many liberals have been misled by the attempt to identify the cause of democracy with a radical government in Barcelona backed by Moscow. Surely no thoughtful observer would claim Stalin as the defender of freedom of thought, speech, conscience and worship. When one dispassionately considers the fearful sufferings of the Catholic Church in Spain it is humiliating that the onus of defending the nationalists should seem to have fallen mainly upon the American Catholics.

As a Protestant I have greatly deplored the apparent lack of generosity and sensitiveness on the part of many of the Protestant clergy toward the persecution of the Catholic Church in Spain. The deeper issue of freedom of conscience and of worship seems to have been strangely ignored. I am therefore all the more grateful to Mr. Laughlin for his splendid exposition of the situation, and to The Post for publishing it.

PHILIP M. BROWN.
Washington, March 31.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There has been much discussion about the supposed Communist character of the government of Spain. The Catholic press, in particular, insists on referring to the loyalists as "Reds." It is important that we know the truth on this point. Anyone can call names, but it is generally recognized that those who hurl epithets are, more often than not, employing the well known herring trick. And the herring used for this trick is always the red herring.

Are the loyalists "Reds?" The British press is generally unsympathetic to the loyalists, as it was favorable to Hitler up to the recent awakening. And the London Economist, one of the most respected financial organs in the world, is certainly not a radical publication. Consequently, the inclosed dispatch from its Barcelona correspondent to the Economist may be accepted without bias toward the loyalists. If the Economist's correspondent saw communism rampant, he would say so. Does he? (Under the heading, "Democracy Maintained," the clipping referred to states that "the republican constitution has never been suspended during the war," adding much evidence in substantiation.—Editor.)

Yours very truly,
New York City, March 20.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: May I say a word in behalf of Dr. Thorning?

The Friends of Spanish Democracy seem to be very indignant over Dr. Thorning's statements. In the first place they are resentful that Dr. Thorning, in their opinion, is speaking for the Catholic Church. Anyone who is at all informed knows that the church does not make official statements through an individual priest speaking over the radio on a secular matter such as the civil war in Spain.

Moreover, even if Dr. Thorning were to speak as an official representative of the church, does not the Catholic Church have the right to defend itself publicly in this country against the false and misleading statements and innuendos that have been appearing constantly in the newspapers and magazines of the United States ever since the war in Spain started? And is there not some connection between these statements and the fact that after the first reports of the civil war there has not appeared a single reference to the systematic destruction of religious persons and property that has been going on for two years in Spain?

Are not the people of this country entitled to hear the truth on both sides of this terrible war? The Friends of Spanish Democracy seem deeply to resent any reference to facts which do not agree with the picture they wish the American people to have. Is it truth or propaganda they are interested in?

In the second place, Dr. Thorning's statement that "the day of the noncombatant has vanished" is neither untrue nor calloused. It is a declaration of a state of affairs that was initiated when the conservative opposition in the Spanish Parliament was shot down in cold blood, and the guns of a ruthless soldiery turned on helpless nuns and priests in the shadow of their convents. Even in the Middle Ages there was sanctuary in church. Those who began this form of warfare in Spain don't seem to care for it any longer. Aside from these considerations, however, anyone who has followed the methods of warfare recently, especially aerial and chemical warfare, knows that civilians will not be respected henceforth.

ELEANOR H. FINCH.
Chevy Chase, Md., March 29.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When is a spokesman of the church not a spokesman of the church? This general proposition or question has been much discussed lately in the press and over the radio. It was precipitated when a professor in a Catholic educational institution publicly championed the cause of Franco in his ruthless air warfare against the government and civilians of Spain.

One important consideration has not been mentioned: The intelligent American Catholic recognizes no religious spokesman for himself in matters secular or political. It is, of course, true that large numbers of the faithful are influenced when Catholic professors and prelates loudly espouse a political cause—they are misled into believing that these propagandists are the voice of the church.

Catholic dogma is universally the same. Incidentals of the church's discipline and psychology vary in different countries. When an American cardinal in Chicago criticized Hitler individual, intelligent Catholics agreed or disagreed. When an Austrian cardinal in Vienna hails Hitler and suggests to the Austrians that they vote for him, the masses of Catholic Austria will follow the suggestion.

If our freedom of speech permits "spokesmen" to influence great blocks of our citizens to support Franco or Hitler it also offers opportunity for exposing dictators and sophistry. THOMAS OAKLEAF.
Washington, March 30.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mounting indignation against the prejudiced attitude of The Post in regard to the Spanish situation has reached a climax, and must needs burst into protest, even though one realizes that such protest will do little or nothing to change the anti-Franco, anti-Nationalist, pro-Communist bias of the paper.

Why the constant, spectacular emphasis on the recent aerial bombings, when all know that the exigencies of war demand that every means be used to end the war quickly? A speedy end to the war alone can mean an end of "horrors" in Spain. In regard to the Barcelona bombings, how often has it been explained that the objectives of the raiders were munitions factories, military storehouses and army concentration camps? Why, also, all the exaggerated emphasis on Spanish Nationalists bombing, in comparison with similar bombings by Japanese in China. Why the reiteration on German and Italian soldiers marching to victory for Franco? What of the Americans and foreign nationals (international brigades) on the loyalist side?

Why, again the insistence on the dangers of a Fascist Spain when Franco wins? In more than one interview with reliable American and English journalists, Franco has stated definitely that he will fashion a government to the needs and wishes of the Spanish people, regardless of powerful nearby Fascist leaders. Franco's victory alone will assure the liberties of the people of Spain. Was there any semblance of democracy, freedom of speech, press, ballot or religion under the Communist-dominated Spanish regime of the prewar government? Granted Franco wins, we can be certain that a Christian state will be established; there will be a reapportioning of the land, and equal sharing of power between capital and labor.

It is real tragedy to have such a large percentage of our people deluded into believing a heroic and successful leader, such as Franco is, a monster, the leader of a "rebel" host! God grant that the truth will triumph when Franco wins, and Spain comes back into her own again. SUSAN LAWRENCE.
Washington, April 1.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please consider yourself commended on your recent editorial entitled "In One-Half Of The World," which I read with hearty approval and also with a feeling that it was timely, even long overdue. It strikes me as being not only strangely inconsistent, this "neutrality" regarding Spain and the lack of it regarding the "other half of the world," China, but definitely unfair as well—unfair, that is, to the Spanish Republic and to all who desire to see Franco defeated and thus another Fascist government avoided, and to all who wish to see established a democracy with a far greater assurance of true freedom of press, assembly, speech, religion and education.

Franco has amply indicated he does not stand for these principles. Furthermore, events transpiring since our neutrality law was applied to the Spanish conflict are showing with increasing clearness that the assumption that this conflict is purely a civil one is definitely erroneous, considering the tens of thousands of Italian "volunteers" (which Mussolini, in his conversations concerning their withdrawal from Spain, tacitly confirms are part of his army), German soldiers and Moorish mercenaries. What chance would the unaided Fascist faction in Spain have against the Spanish people?

It remains, then, in all fairness for us to equalize the application of our neutrality legislation, not because this is a war of invasion rather than a civil one, but because Italy is quite free to ship to the insurgents any munitions purchased from the U. S.

It was with keen indignation that I read of the hideous crime the rebels perpetrated in their attack on the defenseless inhabitants of Barcelona, another they can add to their long list. In view of this and many, many other instances, I can well understand the sharp trend in public feeling in the United States in favor of the Spanish loyalists, as shown by the Institute of Public Opinion survey.

It seems to be rather plainly evident that the church, in throwing its influence on Franco's side, is merely making a bid to regain, if at all possible, its tremendous power, temporal not spiritual, over the Spaniards. It is well to remember that an exhibition of tyranny toward a few is a menace to all.

Meanwhile, the Spanish government is now fighting for its life, and in doing so is fighting against all that a democracy tries to eliminate in making a government of popular representation work. It certainly is in order for us to reconsider our so-called neutrality policy immediately, with the view to aiding this sister republic effectively to rid herself of this cancerous fascism before it is too late, and thus help ourselves control that same fascism in this country, where it has already made itself odiously noticeable.

J. V. E.
Washington, March 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There has been quite an outcry of late against aerial bombings of cities in time of war, resulting in the loss of life of women and children as well as men.

I believe in the final analysis a war that takes toll in lives of men, women and children may be more merciful than a war that kills only the men and leaves the women and children to mourn. If Gen. Franco is convinced that aerial bombings will more quickly bring an end to the war, then I believe he is fully justified in resorting to aerial bombings. In that way he will save many more lives than are lost by the explosion of bombs.

The Post Impressionist

Uncle Horace.

I WANT to write about Uncle Horace because what happened to him before he died is the same thing that has happened to most of us now living. But to most of us it has happened earlier, younger.

Uncle Horace was a man of unusual intelligence. His adaptability is beyond question. He accommodated his life to one upheaval which, to us, would be equivalent of a Red uprising, a Fascist usurpation or a French Revolution.

Not all the colored population of the South was fit for emancipation. In fact, it was not possible to emancipate more than a certain percentage. The refusal to leave the "white folks," in many cases rightly attributed to love, was in more cases due to a complete inability to embrace any new form of existence.

Some time around 1920, when my father took me along on some business with my Great-Aunt Sally Talaferro, I saw a fearful sight. My Great-Aunt Sally lived at a place called Bloomsbury, whose sag-shuttered ill repair approximated that of most old Southern places in that era—before the great wave of renovation began.

My interest, however, centered not on the shutters but on the back porch. A horde of ragged figures of both sexes and all ages, ranging in color from custard to chocolate, swarmed over the steps. In the hour or so that I waited in the automobile they did not move, they only sat. And they muttered. They were waiting to be fed.

They had been there since slave days. They no longer did any work—in fact, there was no work for them to do. They ate, and multiplied. Great-Aunt Sally, a very old lady with a velvet cap in which red curls were sewn, was deathly afraid of them. Living alone, she had become the prisoner of those former slaves.

Those people I cite for contrast with Uncle Horace. He was a field hand when the War for Southern Independence began—that much we were able to glean from his past, of which he seldom talked. Like the Bloomsbury population, he was the property and dependent of some white family. But how different his reaction to liberty! Everything about him bespoke the freeholder. When I was a boy I used sometimes to go to his house. It was not unique, but it was excellent of its type. Built of unpainted clapboard, it was larger than most of the cottages nearby, and its environs were cleaner. Like the others, it had flowers in the yard—some chrysanthemums, some phlox, some annuals like zinnias and cosmos, a rough arbor for a rambling rose. The back porch, which held the wooden tub and the churn, had a scrubbed appearance and a clean smell of turpentine soap. There were big yallow chickens, some ducks and turkeys, both bronze and white. There was a barn somewhere with a cow.

Uncle Horace certainly was no fool. He occasionally worked for us, and I remember that my mother respected his judgment and gave him a free hand about the place. We did not laugh at his insistence that the beans must be planted on the dark of the moon, for if planted then they came up, and if not they didn't. We decided there must be a scientific basis for his method, and later I have seen indications that there is.

Uncle Horace was all uncomplaining, self-reliant person. I never knew him to holler for help but once. Some ground-bees took up residence under one of our humbler outhouses, since discarded in favor of modern conveniences, and stung a visiting aunt. My mother called Uncle Horace to get the bees out. He got them out, but he appeared at the back door with knots forming on his bald black head with its ring of white fuzz.

"Gorra!" he said. "Ain'tcha got no liniment?"

What happened to Uncle Horace was this: Before he died, a sudden change took place—not in him, but in the world. As he passed his hundredth year, his mind was as clear as yours or mine—clearer, perhaps, because more certain. But he analyzed the new system according to the laws of the old.

Uncle Horace still worked his fields after he turned the century mark, but he finally got so he could not quite make both ends meet. Whether his failure was due to old age alone or to the depression I do not know. Everybody else blamed it on the depression, and so we got relief. My mother had charge of various relief funds and materials, and she included Uncle Horace in society's bounty. But—and this is the point of this tale—however often he was told, Uncle Horace could never learn that the help did not come from mother personally. It was one of the rules of life that to get something, you gave something. Hence he brought us ears of field corn, boxes of tomatoes and potatoes.

Mother tried to keep the record straight by giving him money for his contributions to her, but often as not the money only meant more gifts of produce. Many times we would get up in the morning or return from a trip to find a bag of sweet potatoes on the porch. And they were the best sweet potatoes I ever ate. Once Uncle Horace sent us a dozen eggs—pure gold, for he could have used them as currency.

There's nothing more to tell, except that Uncle Horace is dead—and that sometimes, when I'm talking to a Fascist, a Communist, or just an ordinary social worker, I wonder if perhaps I haven't got the same disability he had before he died. TURNER ROSE.

Fair Enough

By
Westbrook Pegler.

Mr. A's $200,000.

LIKE THE touchback and the safety in football, income and capital gains look so much alike that ordinary people can't tell them apart. We are told that income is safely taxable, but that if capital gains be taxed the capitalistic system will die of eating the meat off its own bones—a disagreeable way of ending it all, to be sure.

PEGLER.

By a mental concentration that is downright muscular, some of us can follow the argument as far as the place where the harassed and frantic Mr. X discovers that when he dies the Government will not only take his entire estate but sue his unfortunate, busted heirs for $149,000 deficiency caused by the forced liquidation of his property and the inclusion of bad debts as taxable assets. In conceivable cases, what with one tax and another, pitched in the topmost register, the widow of a penniless man may be better off than the relict of a dead magnate noted for his monogrammed pajamas, his wine and pillared house in the suburbs.

• • • •

I HAVE BEEN reading, however, a hypothetical case, intended to raise alarm, which leaves me calm and also convinced that a mere definition might be used to excuse from taxation persons who by any rule of justice should not be allowed to ride free.

Here is the case:—

Mr. A. buys some shares of stock for $200,000 and in the same year sells them to Mr. B. for $400,000. A few months later, however, Mr. B. doesn't like the look of the market or needs some money to settle a little matter about a girl and sells the stock back to Mr. A. for $200,000. Plainly Mr. A. has made a profit, or gain, as he insists on calling it, of $200,000 within a year on which he would have to pay a tax of $97,000. He thinks he shouldn't pay this tax not merely because he wants to keep the $97,000, but also because he says there has been no increment. Mr. A. has $200,000 more, but Mr. B. has $200,000 less, and Mr. A thinks that the $97,000 taken from him and squandered on wages for Government press agents or for actors to paint their faces and chew language at night represents a living, quivering hunk gouged out of the economic body of the Nation. His objections are partly patriotic, and I don't want to hear any jeering at this point because Mr. A is mine. If you want to jeer, go get one of your own.

• • • •

NOW IT IS my point that whether this $200,000 profit is income or gain makes no difference as long as a man making $3,000 a year and working for it and producing wealth by his work is required to pay an income tax on that. Mr. A makes the point that in his dealings with Mr. B there has been nothing produced. But, whatever the economics of the case, justice demands that Mr. A toss his fair, proportionate dues on the blanket along with the $18 contribution of the $3,000 a year man and quit rolling his eyes about patriotism. If he didn't work for his $200,000 gain, and if nothing was produced, that was a pretty soft touch for Mr. A, and he ought to be glad to get over the fence at the end of the year with a profit of $103,000 for sitting on his dead perch in some broker's office watching the numbers dance by on the electric tape.

While he was sitting in the broker's trap and while he was dining on fancy meats and heavy gravy all year long and worrying about his country our $3,000-a-year friend, whom we will call Mr. C, for chump, was punching the clock, taking a lot of mouth from overbearing customers, fretting about the kid's tonsils and the payment on the jaloppy and gnawing the stringy ends of the tough cuts. How do you think you are going to sell Mr. C the idea that he ought to pay an income tax because he is a producer but that Mr. A may be taxed only at the peril of the nation because his $200,000 gain represented no increment?

I understand that in certain phases the capital gains tax is a terrible thing and should be fixed while the Star-Spangled Banner yet waves, but Mr. A's case and all others like it call for a special clause to bar the door. Catch him, men!

The Once Over

Geography Is Getting Intricate.

Teacher—Children, today we will take up the study of geography. (The pupils groan.) Willie Brown, do you know your geography?

Willie—I had it all clear yesterday but it's hard to tell what's happened overnight.

• • • •

Teacher—Locate Austria.

Willie—Aw, now, teacher! Be reasonable!

Teacher—Can you tell me where Vienna is located?

Willie—I asked Pop and he said "Up a tree."

• • • •

Teacher—Susie Withers, it's your turn. Where is Czechoslovakia?

Susie—Even the Czechoslovakians don't know.

Teacher—What is the capital of Spain?

Susie—Last week or this week?

Teacher—I want to know what city is the capital of Spain today.

Susie—Who doesn't?

• • • •

Teacher—Arthur Wheems, you are holding your geography upside down.

Arthur—The way things are happening to the map today it's just as easy to study it that way, teacher.

Teacher—Bound Germany.

Teacher (sternly)—You have a map right in front of you.

Arthur—Yes, but I haven't a newspaper!

• • • •

Jakie—The Blue Danube.

Teacher—The Danube isn't in Germany.

Jakie—That shows how much you read the newspapers.

Johnny— A boot.

Teacher—And what is Germany shaped like?

Johnny—A heel.

• • • •

Jennie—Paris, Genoa, Brussels, New York and London.

Teacher—Those cities are not in the German empire.

Jennie—They will be if somebody don't stop Hitler.

• • • •

Teacher—Wilbur Hosley, what are the principal cities of China?

Wilbur—I can't name them now, teacher.

Teacher—You used to know what they were.

France Wavers

Blum's "New Deal" Expenses Plus Finances Unaided By Recovery Since '30 Combine To Put Democracy Of Nation At Stake.

By Europax.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

UNDERLYING France's present efforts to achieve political unity is a desperately serious financial situation which—unless it is corrected soon—may well endanger the French democratic regime.

On the surface, international events appear to dominate France's political crises. The search for a strong and stable "national union government" or "cabinet of public safety," as it is variously called, goes on intermittently under pressure of European developments. Thus, Leon Blum, Socialist leader, tried to weld into a solid concentration cabinet the dozen or more groups in the Chamber of Deputies, when Hitler raised the temperature of Europe to furnace heat by annexing Austria.

But primarily, and fundamentally, France's problem is financial and economic, although it is perfectly true that it is aggravated and complicated by Europe's race to rearm—or rather to super-arm.

Finances Have Broken All Cabinets Since '36.

EVERY CABINET of the present French legislature, elected in May, 1936, has fallen for the same basic reason: Inability to handle the financial issue. The monetary and economic tangle has been getting steadily worse each time, until now the question actually arises whether it has not attained proportions too overwhelming to leave much hope of a solution within the framework of liberal democracy and the capitalistic regime.

Just what are the essential facts and figures of the French dilemma?

The whole situation may be summed up, for the sake of simplification, in a single statement: Half the annual income of the French nation is absorbed, in taxation of one kind or another, by the state.

An authoritative estimate, derived from a recent survey, puts the national income of France last year at approximately 200,000,000,000 francs, and total public expenditure at about 100,000,000,000 francs, of which 70,000,000,000 was derived from taxation and 30,000,000,000 from loans.

The significance of this appears when it is recalled that most economic experts agree there is a limit to the proportion of national income which the state can safely take from its citizens, and this limit is generally fixed somewhere between 25 and 35 per cent. In France the proportion is now something like 50 per cent.

This is due to both an increase in state expenditure, and a decline in the French national income. In 1930 the latter was estimated at about 250,000,000,000 francs, but there has been since then, in France as in America, a drop in industrial activity due to the economic crisis. But whereas in the United States business recovery brought national income back up again—at least until the "recession" that began last summer—in France, on the contrary, there has been no sustained and general economic recovery.

Three Causes Cited For French Dilemma.

THERE ARE three main causes for the situation in which France finds itself at present.

The first is a national debt of over 500,000,000,000 francs, the result of a chronically unbalanced budget. This debt—huge for a country the size of France—costs taxpayers annually more than 25,000,000,000 francs—that is to say, more than half the ordinary budget goes to pay the interest on the debt.

This fact calls attention to one of the worst features of the French situation—high interest rates. While the American and British governments can borrow abundantly at 1½ to 2½ per cent, the French government must pay today from 5½ to 7½ per cent. Some short-term loans cost France ten times as much as America.

The second factor is largely, though not entirely, responsible for this state of affairs. It is the fact that French capital in great quantities fled the country in 1934, 1935 and 1936. It is estimated that between 40,000,000,000 and 50,000,000,000 francs were sent abroad during that period. This sum, it should be noted, was for the most exported when the franc was at 75 or 80 to the pound and 15 or 16 to the dollar. In other words, if brought back at present rates of exchange, it would amount to at least 90,000,000,000 francs.

The third reason for France's financial troubles is the arms race, which has obliged the French government to double the amount spent on national defense. Everything included, France is now spending about 30,000,000,000 francs yearly on preparations for war, as against only 14,500,000,000 in 1934. This year the total is expected to reach at least 35,000,000,000 francs—possibly more.

So far, however, we have considered only the strictly financial aspect of the French problem. Actually, finances cannot be separated from the general social and economic picture. If France has lost two-thirds of its huge gold stock and seen its currency fall 50 per cent in the last two or three years, the real reasons are to be found in social developments.

More specifically, much of the difficulty proceeds from France's "New Deal." It should be stated at once that many of the reforms put through by Leon Blum and the Popular Front were sorely needed in France. But, on the whole, the Blum experiment proved little short of catastrophic.

Instead of increasing the purchasing power of the nation, M. Blum's measures, it is proved by recent statistics, have actually lowered the average Frenchman's buying power below what it was two years ago. Living costs have risen by more than 40 per cent, wiping out the wage increases won by the workers. The franc has been devalued, which was tolerable in itself, but without giving to business that favorable impulsion which accompanied devaluation in Britain, in America, and in other European countries.

Furthermore, industrial production has been reduced as a result of the 44-hour week, and manufacturing costs have soared, with the result that, despite the drastic decline of the franc, which should have given a big impetus to French exports, France last year had a record unfavorable trade balance of nearly 20,000,000,000 francs.

Current Depression Only Adds To Problem.

THIS, sketched very briefly, is the economic picture in France today. One could add further details of the sharp business recession which began in January and February. The drop has been almost perpendicular in the business chart of some industries. Only those heavy industries connected with national defense are holding up.

Is it surprising, therefore, that many French observers are asking whether there is still time to save the situation by normal methods—that is, without having recourse to economic autarchy of the German and Italian variety, with all the heavy-handed control system which would almost inevitably lead to abandonment of the liberalism of French democracy?

One chance of avoiding such a course—with all its incalculable repercussions on the other great democracies—is generally agreed to exist. It lies in submerging the political quarrels of right and left, the class hatreds of capital and labor, the ideologies of communism and fascism, and uniting the whole nation around a non-party government capable of restoring confidence.

Naturally, it will not be easy to constitute such a cabinet. France, which prides itself on always being able to produce the man of the moment, is searching about uneasily at present. Some think Leon Blum—turned Ramsay MacDonald—is the answer. Others look to Edouard Daladier, the energetic minister of national defense. Still others feel Edouard Herriot, former premier who is now president of the Chamber of Deputies, could rise to the occasion. Finally, the name of Petain—Marshal Petain who stopped the Germans with his "They shall not pass" at Verdun—is popular among the general public, although he is now an old man.

But over all this hangs the shadow of European uncertainty. Can capital be reassured until peace is established on a better basis? Can order be restored to French finances so long as billions are being poured into munitions? These are questions which add a touch of anguish to the uneasy problem of keeping French democracy afloat.

The Prospective Deal With Italy.

IT IS NOW taken for granted that within a relatively short time the current Anglo-Italian negotiations will bear fruit in a new treaty of friendship between the two nations.

Such a treaty has become indispensable to Neville Chamberlain. He cannot afford to admit that he was wrong and Anthony Eden was right when, in their historic debate in the House of Commons last February, the latter voiced his suspicions of Mussolini's good faith. He must have the diplomatic victory he gambled on even if it is only a gold brick.

OSTENSIBLY the European balance of power, so rudely disturbed by Germany's absorption of Austria, can, so far as Italy is concerned, be restored by a deal with Great Britain.

Italy and Great Britain together with France, which would be only too eager to join forces with them, and the smaller nations that are now in the direct path of the Nazi steamroller, could successfully block further German expansion. And the point need hardly be labored that the stronger and more powerful the Third Reich becomes the weaker is Italy's relative position as a great European power.

But to argue thus is to ignore certain factors of the greatest importance. It must not be ignored, for instance, that not only Germany but Italy as well is an expansionist power. As such the Berlin-Rome axis, however heavily weighted in Germany's favor, still has a certain measure of at least negative usefulness for Mussolini. And as long as that remains true the presumption must be that Italy will not throw the link with Berlin overboard without very ample compensations by London.

• • • •

WHAT CONCESSIONS can Chamberlain make to Mussolini to win the latter over to a truly effective working relationship designed to inhibit Germany's expanding power?

He can and doubtless will agree to recognize Italy's ownership of Ethiopia. He has already recognized Germany's absorption of Austria. He can and may open the British money markets to the Italian treasury. And with Italy's financial position anything but good at the present time that would be a real boon to the harassed Fascist government.

Having spent its substance on wars and war preparations, Italy now finds itself under the dour necessity of increasing Italian armaments further by virtue of Hitler's presence on the Brenner. And there are other concessions which the Tory government might make to win Italian friendship.

• • • •

THERE ARE CERTAIN things which not even Chamberlain at his most purblind will sanction. He may feel very complacent regarding the possibility of Gen. Franco's imminent victory in Spain and its aftermath. But his complacence arises, in no small measure, out of the belief that "Spain will remain Spanish;" in other words that once Franco is master of the nation Italy and Germany, without whose large-scale assistance that victory would not be possible, will withdraw.

Will Germany and Italy withdraw? Mussolini, for his part, has given Chamberlain assurances that the recall of Italian troops is on the cards. But he has used that and similar promises again and again to stall off both the British and the French ever since the nonintervention agreement came into force in the summer of 1936. Certainly the fact cannot be ignored that if he is ambitious to extend Italian power and influence in the Mediterranean, a stakehold in Spain, Spanish Morocco and the Balearics would be extremely valuable.

• • • •

IT ALL GETS down to the question whether an Anglo-Italian agreement for the maintenance of the status quo in the Mediterranean would have any greater chance of being lived up to this time than it did in January, 1937.

At that time the London and Rome governments signed a treaty with that very purpose in mind. But, as Anthony Eden has revealed, the ink on it was hardly dry before the spirit if not the letter of that pact was violated by the dispatch of Italian legions to Spain.

Possibly Mussolini may decide, at this time, to be more circumspect. If Franco wins in the next weeks there would, obviously, be no need for the further dispatch of Italian troops to the Iberian peninsula. And the Duce may, as a sop to Chamberlain, agree to withdraw some of the forces recently sent to Libya, cease anti-British radio propaganda directed toward Arab lands and in other ways manifest good neighborliness toward Great Britain.

SUCH CONCESSIONS would enable Chamberlain to claim that, like Beaconsfield, he had won for his nation "peace with honor." But for how long the bloom would be on the Angle-Italian rose would remain an open question. That would depend on whether, having lost out in Central Europe, Mussolini is also prepared to abandon his ambitions in the Mediterranean in return for British friendship and British loans.

That presumes a good deal. There is at least as great a possibility that Italian quiescence would, regardless of the extent of British concessions, prove a temporary affair and that sooner or later a new attempt would be made by Mussolini to proceed with his plans of a new Roman empire.

In other words it may be that the impending Anglo-Italian treaty will, from a long-run point of view, be a pig in a poke so far as Britain is concerned. But for Chamberlain a pig in a poke is, at the moment, infinitely better than no pig at all.

Origin Of Tariffs

By J. J. Hughes

Strong Men On Rivers.

THE FIRST TARIFFS and customs houses began in a queer way. Long years ago, when the great rivers were the principal arteries of commerce in Europe, strong men, who wished to live by preying on the industry of their neighbors, built their castles or forts on the banks of the Rhine, the Danube and other rivers, and levied fines or tolls on all the commerce that passed up and down these natural highways. In time this lawlessness became a custom, hence the name "customs houses."

After a while, kings thought this would be a good way to raise revenue, and they adopted it, at the same time abolishing, or greatly curtailing, the activities of the free-booters. Later still, governing bodies took over this method of raising revenue, excluding by law all others, and while the system was inherently bad, this change removed some of its evils, because the public got the money thus raised, or most of it.

However, keen-minded, covetous persons never lost sight of the personal advantages that might be obtained through the manipulation of tariffs; hence the continual pressure and the skillfully devised arguments brought to bear upon all governments to make the rates as high as possible.

U. S. Is Granted Appeal on Car Forfeiting Law

Supreme Court to Review Decision in Case of Liquor Violation.

By the Associated Press.

The Government won a Supreme Court review yesterday in its efforts to claim as a forfeit an automobile used in violation of the Federal liquor laws.

The high court agreed to pass upon a decision of the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals which granted the petition of the vehicle's claimant, the Commercial Credit Co., of Greenville, S. C., for a remission of the forfeiture of the car seized under the internal revenue laws.

The automobile was seized from Benjamin G. Walker, of Greenville, who pleaded guilty to an indictment charging unlawful transportation of liquor.

Complied With Law.

The credit company, which financed the car under a conditional sales contract, sought its return on the ground it had complied with the law in investigating the prospective purchaser.

The Government contended that while the sales contract was in the name of Walker's brother, Landrum Walker, it was Benjamin who handled the transaction and who made the only payment before the seizure.

The Government argued the credit firm should have investigated Benjamin Walker, described as the real purchaser, who "had both a record and a reputation for violating State and Federal laws."

U. S. Fears Other Frauds.

"A proper construction of the statute," said the Government, "is of importance to the Government in preventing fraud upon the revenue. If the decision remitting the forfeiture is permitted to stand, it will furnish proposed violators of the law with a simple formula for easily obtaining one of the instrumentalities of their trade and greatly add to the difficulties of enforcing the internal revenue laws."

The court also held constitutional a tax imposed by Louisiana on the Arkansas-Louisiana Pipe Line Co., based on the horse power of engines used in propelling gas from Louisiana into Texas and Arkansas.

Justice Reed delivered the opinion that reversed a ruling by a three-judge Federal District Court for western Louisiana that the assessment was an unconstitutional burden on interstate commerce as applied to this company. Justice McReynolds dissented and Justice Cardozo did not participate.

State's Contention.

The State contended the 1932 legislation imposed "an excise," license or privilege tax for the privilege of manufacturing, producing or generating mechanical power or energy, and is not on the use of the energy or power."

A $7,316 assessment, plus a 25 per cent penalty and 10 per cent attorney's fees, was involved in the litigation. The tax was at the rate of $1 per year for each horsepower capacity of the engines.

The pipeline company said 96 per cent of the natural gas it transported was marketed in Texas and Arkansas.

Property Owners Fail.

A group of property owners of Winona, Miss., failed in an attack on the constitutionality of a 1936 State law under which municipalities were empowered to establish industrial enterprises for the purpose of reducing unemployment.

Saying there was "no substantial Federal question" involved, the high court dismissed an appeal from a ruling of the Mississippi Supreme Court that there was no "constitutional impediment" of the law.

The litigation was begun in the name of W. S. Allbritton, a Winona taxpayer, who asserted the city "is attempting to levy taxes for the purpose of owning, constructing, or leasing a textile, knitting, hosiery, or other manufacturing plant."

Harry Cohen, business representative of the teamsters and chauffeurs' local union at Baltimore, failed in an attempt to set aside his conviction on a charge of riot in a strike against taxicab companies in Baltimore in December, 1936.

The tribunal refused to review a decision by the Maryland Court of Appeals upholding his conviction in the Baltimore Criminal Court. He was sentenced to serve three months in the State penitentiary and fined $5,000.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

Alarm Clock Revolt.

Small voices raise in big protest from the direction of Interior. They are anticipating an order which—under summertime routine—will send them to work an hour earlier, and they don't like it. At least, many don't like it, and the argument is running something like this:

It doesn't relieve traffic congestion . . . It simply routs one from bed at an unseemly hour . . . It adds to the overtime problem because if hundreds have to stay on after 4:30, how can they expect to get off at 3:30 . . . It is impossible to sleep in the early part of hot Washington nights; sleep only comes during the cooler morning hours, and then the early-rising rule breaks that up.

One who signs himself, "One with a passion for anonymity," writes us, fiercely:

"No one I have ever talked with knows why this practice is maintained. Perhaps the 'why' is because by this practice about 1,000 extra hours of work are secured daily from the 10,763 Interior employes. These approximate 6,000 extra hours work each week for five months constitute a good-sized 'why' to any thinking person. And make no mistake about it—those extra hours of work are secured by this means.

"The Honorable Secretary of the Interior never makes a speech that he does not issue a blast against 'chiselers.' A 'chiseler' presumably is another name for 'economic royalist,' a 'selfish few' or anyone who opposes the ideals (if any) of the New Deal. Is it, or is it not 'chiseling' to require these thousands of employes to come an hour earlier during the most uncomfortable part of the year when he has full knowledge that this over-time work is going on?

"As it is, many many employes do not quit at 4:30; some work late at night and on Saturday afternoons. . . . No one can plead ignorance of the fact that an employe who cannot quit at 4:30 certainly cannot at 3:30."

The employes have been asked their preference in the matter. In 1934, Interior employes and those in PWA were asked to vote on retaining the 9-4:30 schedule or going on at 8-3:30 routine for the summer months. Our correspondent continues:

"The regular civil service employes, wise by experience, mostly voted against the change of hours. The PWA's, inexperienced and new to Government business, voted almost in a body for the change of hours . . . Later the PWA's, who were very busy in those honeymoon days, found to their sorrow that they had in many cases merely voted themselves an extra hour of work. The writer may be wrong, but it is believed that if a vote were taken today the result would be against any 8-3:30 schedule. Since 1934, employes have not been asked their preference."

He thinks it takes 40 per cent off his mental and physical efficiency. His views have been emphatic. Have you any on the subject? Send them in.

U. S. Refuses Man Right to Bathe in Back-Yard Brook

By the Associated Press.

William Heller, of Easton, Conn., yesterday lost a prolonged legal battle for the right to bathe in a brook on his own property.

Saying there was no "substantial Federal question" involved, the Supreme Court dismissed his appeal from a State court decision that, inasmuch as the stream eventually flows into a Bridgeport reservoir, bathing in it was a privilege Heller must forego.

Heller was arrested for bathing in Ball Wall Brook, which runs through his 38-acre tract, in July, 1936. The law provides penalties for bathing in reservoirs or streams tributary to them.

He contended the law was not intended to apply to owners of the property on the banks of the stream, and that if it did, it deprived him of his common law riparian rights and violated the fourteenth amendment.

24,600 Residents Added in Year to City's Directory

Wallace Holds Farming Bette. Off Than Business

Secretary Wallace, after a luncheon conference with President Roosevelt yesterday, told reporters: "The farm situation, judging from the figures, is relatively better than the business situation in many sections of the country. We hope the farm situation will continue to hold its present status until the business situation improves."

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This problem may call for a psychologist, but I'd like to get your slant on it. My husband and I are separated, getting a divorce. Our life together was short and not very sweet, although it included some hours of joy and fun. However, all the bitterness is gone now, after seven months of separation, and we feel friendly toward each other. My concern is for my husband's job and his future.

* * * * *

From my observation of his nature, and also from comments of others who knew him long before I did, I realize he does not know what he wants, either in the line of livelihood or personal happiness. The poor boy is a misfit even with himself. He frequently says if he doesn't like himself, why should others like him. He admits—even boasts—of being "ornery." Yet beneath his unpleasant bravado and defiance is a desperately unhappy longing to find some peace.

* * * * *

Thus, in his work, he quickly tires of a job and wants something new. Before we married, he quit a good job because he tired of it, and didn't find work again (except for a three-week period) until a few months ago. He had been out of work a year, and at first was all enthusiasm over this new job, as it was along a line which interested him and he looked forward eagerly to continuing in it.

* * * *

I saw him recently, to talk over divorce plans, and from the way he talked I could see he was rapidly getting fed up with the job, which he says is monotonous and routine; he doesn't like the town, and he had recently fallen in love with an engaged girl whose parents have now sent her off to marry her fiance. (In my opinion, she'll be much better off married to her fiance than waiting for my husband, as she will have a better chance of happiness, but I didn't tell him that, merely sympathized.) Added to all this, he has agreed to pay divorce expenses, sending the money to me to turn over to my lawyer. I understand him well enough to know that having to send that money isn't going to make him any more contented. He'll feel he's in a cage and pretty soon he'll make a break, fling this job to the winds, and be back in Washington minus work and on the loose with frustration added to his already unhappy, restless, gnawing disposition.

* * * *

I have in mind to write him and advise him to locate a job in Washington, then resign his present position and come back here to work. Yet I know if he does quit there and get work here once more, he'll be fed up on the new job in a few months and want something else, and it will be a case of still another job thrown up. He can't seem to learn that you've got to stick to a thing, whether it is agreeable or not. I don't think he'll ever grow up. I'm pretty much of an immature kid myself, but honestly, he's more of a baby than I am. I've managed to grow up to some slight extent in the last two years, but he doesn't try to develop a mature reaction.

* * * *

What's going to happen to the boy? His people have helped him considerably, but they won't always be here to help him when he breaks the traces. He's got to be a man some day. He's 27 and acts like 20. Do you advise me to write to him along the line outlined? If I don't, he'll do it anyway, without even taking the precaution of getting another job before quitting his present one. I want to help him, yet I don't know what is wise.

NANCY.

Laziness His Handicap.

DEAR NANCY: It is my flinty-hearted opinion that persons such as your ex-husband can only be helped—if at all—by being forced to deal, unaided, with the painful consequences of their own selfish irresponsibility. This man's parents, and you, are rendering him a positive disservice in trying to anticipate, obviate, or stand between him and the punishment his own actions invite. The underlying reason why he throws up jobs is laziness—nothing more; nothing less. I suppose his parents have been picking up after him, literally as well as figuratively speaking, all of his life, and he blandly expects them—or some substitute parent—to continue performing the same office for him to the end of his days.

* * * *

That "desperately unhappy longing to find peace," which underlies his "unpleasant bravado and defiance," is the soul-ache (if I may call it such) of a man who is refusing to make a normal social adjustment. He is refusing to take his modest, hard-working place in the general scheme of things. He wants success in work, love and play served up to him on a silver platter, without any effort on his part having been made, yet should it be conceded to him thus with all the garnishings, he would be bored to death with it and himself, and his unhappy search for contentment would go on. Contentment follows only in the wake of purposeful, disciplined, relatively successful effort; and self-respect accrues to him who exercises his social, professional and emotional capabilities in constructive, productive, co-operative ways.

* * * *

Too lazy to do the saving and healthful thing; too ignorant to know the cause and cure of his phychic distress; yet intuitively divining that the error is within himself, this man is bluffing it out by pretending to himself and to the world that he was born cussed. He is striving for a subversive kind of distinction, since he refuses to work for a more commendable brand of notice.

* * * *

Writing, in "How to Be Happy Though Human," of those who shirk their adult responsibility in the social field of work, and pay the price in fretful failure, the late Dr. W. Beran Wolfe had this to say: ". . . The great majority of dissatisfied workers are dissatisfied with work, rather than with their jobs. The spoiled and pampered child considers any job an insult to his 'face' and his own opinion of his personal value. No job suits him because he has not grown up to the point where work appears as self-explanatory and utterly satisfying as a philosophy of life.

* * * *

"Laziness and procrastination," he continues, "are the commonest sideshows of the work arena . . . Their protest takes the form of passive resistance to work . . . If you can inflate your ego with any of the spurious devices of laziness, changing of jobs, procrastination . . . dilettantism, criticism, fault-finding, or by setting up impossible conditions under which you will deign to work, you accomplish your end much more cheaply . . . than if you had a little more courage and set out to batter down some real obstacles and made a profession of some socially useful work that would help satisfy your personal need for significance."

* * * *

This renowned psychiatrist tells us, too, that "something there is in every human being—call it conscience, 'over-soul' inborn social feeling, 'race consciousness' or what you will—that pricks him when he welches on his responsibilities as a human being. It is the sting of this unconscious realization of the fitness of things that prods the side-show artist to overact."

* * * *

No alteration of outward circumstance, no change of job, social environment or marriage partner, and no amount of protective intervention is going to invest your husband with peace, happiness and success. His only hope lies in changing his reaction to life; in growing up, psychologically, and dealing with reality on an adult plane. Had he not been so over-protected from bruises by well-meaning relatives, he might have discovered the wisdom of so doing before now. Rather than write him a letter, why not buy a copy of Dr. Wolfe's book, read it carefully, underscoring the passages which apply to your husband's blind spots as you know them, and mail the book to him without comment. If that doesn't open his eyes, I am fairly certain that anything you might compose, along the same lines, would meet with equal failure.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, April 4.

WHAT IS PROBABLY our city's leading shambles has run its course for the spring of '38, and those of us who lived through it in line of duty are not quite the same. Still in there punching, perhaps, but without exactly the same zing. I refer to the annual convention of International Beauty Shop Owners. It almost completely takes apart our sizable Pennsylvania Hotel, and the drummers who habitually stop there usually run to the subway for protection, and perhaps even sleep there.

ALICE HUGHES

This convention, naturally, has its princes of the blood—the big shots, who create coiffures, and think up styles, and start trends. But the great mass of the thousands which pour through the exhibits consist of the Miss Mamie, Miss Belle and Miss Hattie, who do our hair at the Corner Beauty Shoppe. Add several thousand mere lookers, all very vocal and pushing, and you have an occasion through which you are very lucky indeed to live without being badly maimed.

When young Mr. David Hearst startled us all by instantaneously marrying beautiful nightclub Hope Chandler at the stylish downtown Grace Church, the rector was the Rev. Mr. Russell Bowie, who once presided over St. Paul's Church, Richmond. She wore a boot tan ensemble of a long wool coat and a matching crepe dress, and was undoubtedly the prettiest bride who ever walked up the Queen Mary gangplank. She even stole the show from such old reliables as Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, who have completely ceased to be "news" in the conventional sense. However, I may note that Mrs. Doug wore no hat, as usual, and several milliners hissed softly.

When you come to town to see our county fair, or before, the glib rubberneck guides who plead to serve you will be chemically pure—at least from the legal viewpoint. Our boss cop, Mr. Valentine, is checking the life-records of all guides and tour-conductors, just to be sure they have never spent any time in the calaboose, since from now on they will need licenses. This will be for your special protection, though I suppose it is never too late for a guide to start being naughty.

Wardrobe for Junior Miss, Designed by Students

YOUR FIGURE MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

FAIR, FAT AND 40 around the hips is an accurate description of the middle-aged spread. Beauty authorities do not allow more than 39 inches for the hip measurement of any figure, and most women over 25 are ahead of their quota.

Hips bear the brunt of your weight and are apt to be your main reason for exercise, because this central parking place for adipose tissue is unaffected by diet. You can take off 10 pounds without dislodging a fraction of an inch from the hipline. What it takes to slim this measurement is unremitting exercise.

There is one measure that hip bulges cannot withstand and that is kicking. If most of the fat is concentrated on the back of the hipline, then it is high backward kicking that you need. You can kick higher and more vigorously by hanging onto a chair back for support. Hold the knee straight and swing it!

A forward bend at the trunk does not detract from the value of the exercise. The main thing is to swing the leg back as high as possible. Begin with five times for each leg and gradually go up to 100 counts for each.

Patting Insufficient.

Those bumptious fat pads along the side thighline can be smoothed out with pummeling. Double up your fists and go after them, moving the fists in a brisk patter of blows up and down the side thighline. That breaks down the fatty tissue, but you must follow through with exercise to strengthen these muscles, for only well-toned muscles can hold the figure to smooth, lovely lines.

The sideward kick uses the outer thigh muscles. Hold onto the chair back and kick straight out to the side as high as possible. Kick six times with each leg, later working up a total of 50 kicks.

If you need to strengthen the muscles along the inner side of the thigh, practice crossward kicking. Still hanging onto the chair back swing the leg out to the side and then across and in front of the body to the extreme opposite side. That puts the unused muscles to work! Start out with ten swings and gradually work up to fifty in all, resting after each ten.

It is not easy to get into an exercise program that will streamline the hips and thighs, but once you really get the swing of it you will be amazed at the rapid improvement in your figure.

By Ethel Ehlen,
Post Fashion Editor.

"THE MAJORITY of young girls dress in clothes that are too old for their youth. That goes for both styling and material."

It was Miss Ada Klein-Peter speaking, as she supervised a fashion show given by the graduating class in costume design of the King-Smith School, of which she is the instructor.

"What materials do you consider too old?" she was asked. "Satins, brocades, lames, sequins — anything that glitters," she replied. "It is just as bad for the junior miss to go in for clothes beyond her age as it is for the older woman to try to look like a flapper. Dressing to your age is just as important as dressing to your personality and individual figure."

MISS KLEIN-PETER.

Simplicity should be the theme throughout the wardrobe of the girl of high school and college age, Miss Klein-Peter believes, and this means both basic costumes and accessories. "The young girl can affect more striking color combinations than her mother, for instance," she said, "but accents should be youthful rather than sophisticated. Unlike planning clothes for adults when line is the most important thing to consider, clothes for the sub-deb make no preference as to line and color; one is just as important as the other in youthful costume designing."

Tailleurs Youthful.

Tailored costumes are especially good for the young figure, Miss Klein-Peter pointed out, as they are smart, youthful and slenderizing. Prints, she believes, are particularly adaptable to juniors, either small or large, splashy patterns (unless the girl is short and on the plump side). This same idea, she explained, applies to combining solid colors and prints or plaids and the like for the popular shirtwaist and skirt style, and for jackets and skirts of different color tones for spectator sports clothes. The peasant-influenced fashions now in vogue, with their fitted bodices and very full skirts, are ideal for the junior miss, she feels, either in the daytime or evening versions.

Of paramount importance when choosing clothes for any occasion, whether it happens to be a school dress or a dancing gown, Miss Klein-Peter explained, is the selection according to your complexion and type. "For example," she said, "the blonde girl who is tall and fragile looking should choose pale color tones, bouffant-skirted dresses and very feminine and fragile-looking materials. The brunette, however, can wear stronger colors, more sophisticated lines and heavier appearing fabrics." If you are vivacious, wear clothes which are vivid and animated, she pointed out.

Fashion Careers.

Miss Klein-Peter, who has been head of the costume design class at the King-Smith School for six years, began her career as a designer in New York City. She has also had designing experience in Paris. As for the chances for young girls now choosing designing as a career, she thinks the opportunities in this field were never so great. Among the numerous phases of designing which may be applied in a practical manner she cited the following: Selling jobs in department stores which lead to merchandising and buying positions; styling for stores and shops; personal shopping, radio, designing for stores or manufacturers, sketching fashions for publications.

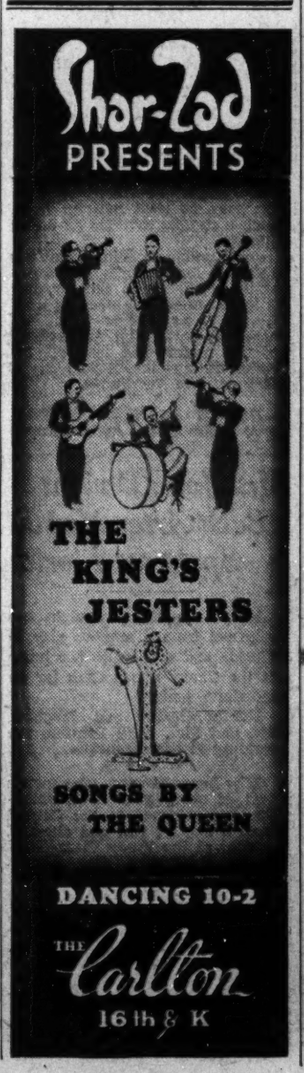
Paris Shops Accord Yellow Important Place in Fashions

Paris (U.P.).—So much has been said this spring of the new pastel shades; orphelia mauve, sea-weed blue, rose dragree, and all the other variations of pink, blue and green, that one may get the impression that all other colors are simply passe.

It is not necessary to emphasize the continual smartness of black and navy blue, especially when combined with white, but if there is a color that hasn't been given its just due, it's yellow. Yet there isn't a famous dress-making house in Paris that hasn't brought out this sunny shade in its spring showing.

Maggy Rouff used yellow jersey for a playsuit; also for an afternoon dress and its hip-length jacket, both dress and jacket trimmed with embroidered scallops and edges and hems.



The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Smart Babies.

DR. NANCY BAYLEY REID, research assistant in the Institute of Child Welfare of the University of California, has discovered from numerous experiments that there is no way of telling just how smart a newly born baby is. Intelligence tests don't work on very young infants, she says, and no one can predict whether newly arrived junior will be an intellecual or a plug, take after his mother's illustrious great uncle or "his father's people."

* * * *

To put it scientifically, "intelligence cannot be measured until nerve and muscular co-ordination are sufficiently developed to make possible the responses which mark intelligence."

* * * *

Dr. Reid's study is said to be one of the most important made in years by psychologists and it received an award from the American Educational Research Association. But just the same there are several million proud papas and boasting grandmothers who will say "Bah!"

Love or Money?

ELINOR RICE, young novelist, author of "The Best Butter," thinks the current feminine craze for pleasing men is likely to leave women out on a limb. It would be better, she insists, for them to direct some of the energy they expend competing for men into making themselves more self sufficient.

* * * *

Despite all the modern talk about women's independence, girls are brought up, says Miss Rice, to think that bagging a Prince Charming is the end of existence and will solve all their problems. As a result, they suffer disillusionment and heartache and, what is worse, fail to develop their own talents. Such a system, she says, makes women regard each other as potential enemies, and keeps them in sentimental bondage to men.

* * * *

This sounds like the good sensible talk heard at the beginning of the feminine career era when mothers harped to their daughters on the advisability of having their "own money to spend." Can it be that another cycle of feminine attitudes is ending and that the glamour girl is on the way out?

Bored at 40.

GRACE LOUCKS ELLIOTT, psychologist and consultant on problems of the modern home for the Young Women's Christian Association, warns women against the after-40 ennui, a subject on which she should be an authority as she studied older women's problems for her doctorate. The way to avoid this middle-aged dullness, she says, is to train for a vocation in youth. She believes most wives would be better off if they had at least part-time employment with pay outside the home and such activity would give them vocational satisfaction in later life. She thinks this is better than doing volunteer work outside the home as a "dilettante participant." This sounds like a nice program, but after all there is the little matter of getting the jobs.

What Men Like.

THE IDEAL GIRL has now been set forth according to Harvard specifications. Here is what the Hasty Pudding Club wants of the queen it will crown at its jamboree Friday night at the Waldorf-Astoria: The easy humor and light gayety of Irene Dunne; the tailored smartness of Gladys Swarthout; the sweet charm of Deanna Durbin; the depth and appeal of Louise Ranier; the spontaneous combustion of Carol Lombard; the open freshness of Margaret Lindsay and the intelligent candor of Myrna Loy.

What! How come Saint Cecilia and Mary Magdalene are slighted?

Social Huddles.

PROF. BERTHA G. GOLD, of the department of physiology and hygiene at Hunter College, says young people who disappear in pairs at social gatherings are hindering their own emotional development. Certainly there are a lot of hostesses who wish Prof. Gold's warning might be extended from pairs to groups, especially to the men's football huddle at the buffet where the Scotch is being served.

'Altrusa' Plans Aid For Older Woman In Rut in Her Work

Chicago (AP).—What is to be done about the woman of 30 or beyond who finds herself out of kilter with the chosen vocation?

That question is challenging the ingenuity of women's organizations and employment specialists. Altrusa International, a group of 3,600 women executives, considers it to be of prime import and this belief is bolstered by analysis of a survey conducted by employment agencies in 20 cities.

Miss Mary Margaret Kern, of Chicago, Altrusa's secretary-treasurer, said the organization was seeking ways to aid the so-called "older woman" who has "gotten into a rut in her business or profession, or lost her job."

One of these, Miss Kern said, is the possibility of recommending to member clubs the establishment of loan scholarships for the "older woman" on the same idea of those which many of the individual clubs now give to girls in high school, business school or college.

Mrs. Roosevelt Faces Busy Spring Program

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

From now until summer, life for the First Lady will be largely one handshake after another. With spring vacations dotting current school calendars and convention season in the offing, flocks of students, club women and prize winners will continue to descend upon the Capital . . . each one hoping to meet the chatelaine of the White House. And between now and June thousands will.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Back in Washington after a 7,000-mile lecture tour that kept her away for four weeks and took her to the West Coast, Mrs. Roosevelt began her spring receiving yesterday, shortly before her press conference, when she shook hands with a group of pupils from Briarcliff, N. Y. Following her conference she presented to Miss Jacqueline Cochran (Mrs. Floyd Odlum) the trophy of the International League of Aviators for "the year's outstanding achievement in aviation."

Later, she entertained at luncheon the group witnessing the presentation. In the company were Mr. Odlum, Col. Charles E. Kerwood, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Seversky, Miss Nancy H. Love, Miss Helen M. Rough, Miss Daisy Kirkpatrick and Alobert I. Lodwick.

At her conference she said she also expected to have among her luncheon guests Miss Rachel M. Palmer, who recently returned from a trip abroad, bringing with her several gifts for the First Lady from Dayang Dayang, Sultana of Sula. Miss Palmer, however, did not arrive yesterday. She probably will be here later this week.

Receives Several Groups at White House

After luncheon yesterday Mrs. Roosevelt received five students from Radcliffe College, brought by Miss Janet Berger. Then, from 2 to 4 o'clock she talked with a group of colored public welfare workers and women executives from Government departments, a meeting arranged by Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, assistant administrator of the WPA. From 4 to 5 o'clock Mrs. Roosevelt received a group of social security workers.

Her schedule today will be equally as crowded, according to the list of engagements she read from her little black book at her conference. She will lunch at the Shoreham with the Seventy-three Club (wives of Representatives and Senators elected to the Seventy-third Congress). This afternoon from 4 to 5 o'clock she will receive Dr. Martha M. Eliot, who will have with her a group from the children's bureau. This evening Mrs. Roosevelt will attend a CCC dinner, at which she will read a letter from the President, and from there she will go to the Philadelphia Symphony concert at Constitution Hall.

Going to New York To Buy Easter Bonnet

On either Wednesday or Thursday she will be off to New York "to do some Easter shopping" and to speak at a meeting on old-age pensions arranged by Miss Ruth Hill. While Mrs. Roosevelt is away she probably will go on up to Hyde Park before returning to the Capital. On Wednesday, April 13, she will be back in Washington to talk at the University of Maryland on "The Importance of Knowing Our Government." That afternoon she will receive two groups at the White House, and that evening she will give a brief radio address. Her next press conference will be on Thursday, April 14.

Yesterday, after she had concluded outlining her program for this week and most of next, she answered a wide variety of questions, ranging from impressions gleaned on her recent tour to comments on current plays. She said she was surprised when a recent opinion of hers on a current New York play precipitated a flood of reproofs, and pointed out that she had no idea anyone would interpret her comments as an attempt at serious dramatic criticism. She mentioned that she had received a scathing letter from Alexander Woolcott, suggesting that a bad dinner must have preceded her attendance at Thorton Wilder's "Our Town." She reiterated her view, however, that the play depressed her, and implied that she found it far less entertaining than either "Substance and Shadow" or "On Borrowed Time."

* * * *

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: After a sojourn in Palm Beach, Miss Bell Gurnee has returned to Washington and reopened her house on Sixteenth street . . . Mme. Sigurd von Numers, wife of the secretary of the Finnish Legation, has cards out for a tea on Tuesday, April 12 . . . Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bruce will leave tomorrow for New York, where on Friday evening at the Whitney Museum Mr. Bruce will receive the Friedsam Gold Medal for 1938. The award is given annually to the person whose work for the year has done "the most toward furthering interest in American art. Mr. Bruce heads the division of sculpture and painting for the Treasury Department. The medal will be presented to him under auspices of the Architectural League of America.

Mme. van Swinderen, who is visiting her mother, Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, was guest of honor at a small tea given yesterday afternoon by Viscountess J. H. de Sibour in her apartment at 3230 N street.

The hostess was assisted during the afternoon by Mme. Prochnik, making one of her rare social appearances since her husband ceased to be Austrian Minister here, and by her daughters-in-law, Mrs. Blaise de Sibour and Mrs. Jean de Sibour. The latter is a daughter of Mme. Pochnik.

Among those who dropped in were Mrs. Warren Austin, Mrs. Reginald Huidekoper, Mrs. Walter Denegre, Mrs. Chandler Hale, Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. Corcoran Thom, Miss Mary Randolph and Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt.

Mme. van Swinderen will remain here until the end of April, when she will sail for her home in London.

Mrs. Bell Fetes Mrs. W. S. Carey

With Mrs. William S. Carey, wife of the commissioner of sanitation in New York City, as her guest of honor, Mrs. Raymond bell entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Shoreham. Mrs. Carey is the house guest of Miss Maxine Davis.

The company of eight included, in addition to Mrs. Carey and Miss Davis, the latter's other house guest, Mrs. Lanning Harvey, of Bear Creek, Pa.; Mrs. John L. Lewis, and her house guest, Mrs. Edith Thomas; Mrs. Henry Luckey, wife of Representative Luckey, of Nebraska, and Mrs. Edward Bruce.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

AS WE prophesied some time ago, Washington society is beginning to look toward the out-of-doors for its parties, now that spring is officially here. Several hundred of its more prominent members are already praying that Saturday evening, April 23, will be a pleasant one, as that is the night selected by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss and Representative Robert Low Bacon for a dance at "Dumbarton Oaks," the Bliss estate in Georgetown.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Dancing will no doubt be indoors, but nobody who is invited to the Blisses can resist the temptation to wander a bit in the lovely grounds outside with their terraces, green vistas and flower beds.

* * * *

THE DANCE will celebrate the Blisses' and Bacon's wedding anniversaries, and there will doubtless be a dozen dinners beforehand. One is already scheduled with the former Ambassador to Spain and Mrs. Irwin Laughlin as hosts. The Canadian Minister and Lady Marler are also entertaining that evening; they will return about Easter from a trip to Alabama and New Orleans.

Other dinners: The Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles already have cards out for a dinner May 14 . . . Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts will entertain at a similar party April 19.

LO, the poor diplomat! And wonderful indeed are the ways of protocol. The French Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint Quentin, has had to make or receive over a hundred calls on or from officials since he arrived in this county a few weeks ago. Furthermore, etiquette requires that each one stay at least half an hour. Such a routine requires an entire month.

Ambassador de Saint Quentin is a glutton for work. He goes down to the chancery on Sunday, and is there almost any evening until 7. So hostesses who had hoped to snare him for cocktail parties might just as well not bother to try—they'll be lucky if they get him for dinner.

DONNA FRANCES ROSSO, wife of the Italian Ambassador to the Soviet, is becoming a Moscow-Washington commuter par excellence. Here last autumn for a stay, she will return again for a visit early in July.

Her traveling companion to the United States will be Mrs. T. Sims Joyner, of Washington, a friend. Mrs. Joyner is leaving the end of the month for a trip to Moscow as guest of the Ambassador and Donna Frances.

Rosso is a former and very popular envoy to Washington. He met his wife here and they were married about two years ago in Paris.

J. Edgar Hoover may have made the headlines the other day by meeting a pretty blonde lady at the Mayflower for dinner, but yesterday he was lunching unsensationally with another man. This elusive bachelor must have a way with headwaiters, as the entire dining room staff was scraping and bowing before him.

Practically every woman lunching at the Mayflower yesterday sported a new spring bonnet. We saw Miss Carlina Sheridan in a becoming black frock and matching straw hat coming in with half a dozen young men who looked as though they might be vacationing from school or college. Also glimpsed were Mr. and Mrs. David Lawrence, the latter in a print; Laurence Bungardeanu lunching with two distinguished looking men; and Mrs. William R. Castle.

MICHAL BUDNY, popular attache of the Polish Embassy, will be off in May for a vacation of two months in Poland.

* * * *

HAVING THE Roosevelt sons patronize a night-club is about as flattering to the owner as the visit of royalty would be abroad, but just the same the managers of expensive haunts in New York were a little worried a few nights ago when the President's sons "did the town." James, Franklin, jr., and John went from one night club to the other last week, and at each one a hefty waiter or two hovered behind their chairs. This was for fear that a tipsy economic royalist who was faring badly under the recession might be tempted to heave a bottle of soda water at the Roosevelt head.

The James Roosevelts were accompanied on their nocturnal excursions in Manhattan by Mr. and Mrs. George Grant Mason, who visited them recently in Washington. Mrs. Mason is the daughter of Mrs. Ormand Lawson-Johnston, formerly of Washington and now of London. The Masons reside in Havana.

Mrs. John Dwight Back After Month Spent in Florida

Mrs. John Henry Dwight has returned from a month's stay in Florida and will make her home at the Chevy Chase Club for an indefinite period.

Her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Preston, are residing in San Francisco.

* * * *

Miss Laura Verram, who spends part of every year in Washington, has returned to the Capital from a stay of two and one-half months at the Vinoy Plaza Hotel in St. Petersburg, Fla. She is staying at the Carlton.

* * * *

Margaret Seckel Will Be Married To R. G. Taylor

Of interest to newspaper circles of Washington is the announcement by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Seckel, of Brooklyn, N. Y., of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Margaret Christie Seckel, to Robert Grayson Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Taylor, jr., of Kansas City. Mr. Taylor is a correspondent here for the Wall Street Journal.

Women Voters Oppose 'Shacks' at Blue Plains

The Post Club Editor.

A resolution opposing "the granting by the budget bureau of funds for a deficiency appropriation to build temporary shacks at the Blue Plains for the housing of inmates at present at the National Training School for Girls, pending the development of a permanent program" was adopted last night at a special meeting of the D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters. The resolution further pledged support of "Senate Resolution 260, introduced for the examination of recent studies pertaining to the children's institutions of the District of Columbia."

The action was taken by the league preceding the joint meeting with the education committee of the local branch of the American Association of University Women for a panel discussion of the school needs of the District, held at the A. A. U. W. clubhouse.

Curtailment of the authority of the Board of Education through legislation nullifying its powers, through authority vested in the Commissioners, director of the budget and Congress to set aside its recommendations, and through the power over its executive functions exercised by citizen groups at Congressional hearings, was blamed last night for Washington's educational ills.

The necessity for local autonomy in the conduct of the schools was emphasized in the report of Mrs. Robert Olesen, chairman of the A. A. U. W. committee which conducted a study in conjunction with the department of government and education of the League of Women Voters here. Mrs. William Savin is chairman of the department. It also was stressed in the discussion by Dr. Paul David of the report of the President's Advisory Committee on Education, of which he was associate director of studies.

District Outstanding As Bad Example

Dr. David said the President's Advisory Committee, composed of educators and businessmen from all sections of the country, and appointed to determine the need of Federal aid for schools in the States, had given particular attention to the District of Columbia and decided that the Government should sweep its own doorstep clean. He quoted from the report what he said expressed the sentiment of the committee that "in no instance had the Federal Government departed so far from the spirit of government institutions as in the District of Columbia."

Mrs. Olesen's report, copies of which were available to the guests at the close of the session, went into details as to the various ways in which the powers of the Board of Education had been whittled down since 1906, until it had become practically impotent.

Legislative riders, including the famous "red" one, have been responsible for much of the curtailment the board has suffered in its power, she said. There have been more than 30 of these attached to the appropriation bills since 1922, many of which have become permanent legislation. Obstructions have been put in the way of construction of new buildings—the Jefferson Junior High School was cited as an example.

Another rider cited as a trouble-maker was that providing that "all buildings belonging to the District of Columbia shall be under the jurisdiction and control of the Commissioners of said District"—the provision responsible for the present controversy as to appointment of custodial employes.

The external control prevents the building program from keeping pace with a developing school program, Mrs. Olesen said; results in the failure of appropriations for maintenance to increase with the increase of building ($10,000,000 worth of new buildings has been added without increase in the maintenance fund); hinders the teaching staff from increasing in proper ratio to the increase in enrollment; means the total appropriations for schools are not in proper relation to other expenditures in the District budget and makes it impossible for the board to provide special services generally recognized as functions of a progressive school system.

Citizens Stand In Their Own Way

Citizens themselves, at Congressional hearings, she said, nullify the powers of the board. Groups appearing at Congressional hearings give testimony which often carries more weight than that of members of the board, although their interests may be purely sectional whereas the board has planned with the needs of the whole city in view.

The results of such interference, Mrs. Olsen said, are that money is appropriated for buildings irrespective of the board's recommendations; needed additions to buildings are delayed; health and recreational programs are hopelessly confused the curriculum is affected and the need for teachers is not met.

Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, president of the local League of Women Voters, presided at the meeting and Mrs. Bennett Schauffler, of the league, read excerpts from the report of the President's Advisory Committee as they applied to the District of Columbia. She called attention to the fact that its recommendations are those of the committee from the league and the A. A. U. W. regarding the situation here followed each other closely.

On the panel, in addition to Dr. David were Dr. William H. Bristow, former deputy superintendent of Public Instruction for the State of Pennsylvania; Miss Charl O. Williams, field secretary of the National Education Association; Miss Bertie Backus, and Dr. W. A. Alves, of the Federal Office of Education.

Dr. Alves asserted there were "too many fingers in the pie for sound administrative procedure and business practice." He expressed the belief it would be possible to "knock down some of the fences" and remedy the situation.

Among guests at the dinner were Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, of the Board of Education; Dr. Frank Ballou, superintendent of schools, and Dr. Chester Holmes, assistant superintendent.

Dean Morriss Here for Funds From Alumnae

Dr. Margaret Shrove Morriss, dean of Pembroke College, Brown University, and president of the American Association of University Women, was here on two missions yesterday, both money matters. She attended a meeting of the finance committee of the association in the afternoon and addressed a Brown alumnae meeting in the evening at the Parrot Tea Room, discussing the campaign for funds for the new dormitory, in which the alumnae are participating.

In an interview yesterday afternoon, Dean Morriss discussed the training offered in colleges in relation to the preparation of the student to take her place in economic life. Most of the graduates of Pembroke obtained jobs soon after they received their diplomas last spring, she said, but many did not go into the work for which they had prepared. The fact that many do not find openings in the field into which they plan to go, means that the colleges must give them a background of the liberal arts which will make them more adaptable than they would be with highly specialized vocational training, she said.

It is not possible to gain this and specialize too within a four years' course, she explained. Liberal colleges must take the attitude that students must get further training and not consider what they are receiving to be strictly vocational. She believes women's colleges must adhere to liberal education—meaning "liberal" as "liberal arts" in the conservative sense.

Mrs. David Simon yesterday was elected president of the Sisterhood of Eighth Street Temple, succeeding Mrs. Frederick Pelzman, who was president during the past year. Mrs. Pelzman succeeded Mrs. Simon as first vice president.

E. Lichtman, Mrs. David Bornet and Mrs. Simon Eichberg, auditors.

The directors are Mrs. Allen DeFord, Mrs. Emanuel Haas, Miss Bertha Israel, Mrs. Morris Jaffee, Mrs. Martin Mendelsohn, Mrs. Maurice Salomon, Mrs. Bert Sarazan, Mrs. Herbert Sommers, Mrs. Sherry Stein and Miss Marie Steiner.

A tea honoring the new officers was held following the business session. Mrs. Herbert Sommers was in charge of arrangements and Mrs. Jeffrey Abel, Mrs. Henry Louis and Mrs. Julian Behrend poured.

Helen Norfleet Returns to N. Y.

Miss Helen Norfleet, musician and educator, returned to New York City last night after spending the week-end here as the guest of Mrs. Charles T. Holman and Mrs. Leo Dallas Sturgeon.

Miss Norfleet, who, with her sister, Catherine, violinist, and brother, Leeper Norfleet, cellist, forms the Norfleet Trio, is now devoting much of her time to her school in New York, founded three years ago, and unique in its plan of education. The enrollment is at present limited to ten resident students and a few additional day pupils. The girls are given besides instruction in their special subjects, a cultural background, based on survey of the culture of the Western world.

For 25 years the Norfleet camp in Peterborough, N. H., has been almost as well known as the MacDowell Colony, of which it is a neighbor. This season it will open in a new location at Peterborough, a 200-acre estate, with a large colonial house in which the music room will be used for Sunday concerts and other rooms for studios and recreation. The girls will sleep in cabins as they did at the original location.

A new course has been added to the camp this year, according to Miss Norfleet, a normal course for dancing teachers and recreation leaders, designed to give them pageant and program material and instruction in folk lore dramatization. It is taught by Lalo Rom, Polish artist who has much unpublished folk material.

Enrollment in the camp is limited to 30 and students range in age from 5 to 25 years. Miss Helen Kindler, daughter of Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra and Mrs. Kindler, was there summer before last, and other Washington girls have attended past seasons also.

Men in Majority At Women's Club

Rural electrification, progressing at a faster pace than anticipated by Congress in authorized allotments, is seen by Director John Carmody of the Rural Electrification Administration as a force for "revitalizing democracy." He addressed the Woman's National Democratic Club at its forum luncheon yesterday.

The meeting was unique in that, at this woman's club meeting, men were in a preponderance. Among those present, all associated with the REA, were Col. George D. Babcock, Ward Freeman, Willard Herring, Vincent D. Nicholson and M. L. Ramsey.

Mrs. Carmody is enthusiastic about the co-operation found throughout the country for the REA program. Utility companies, he finds, no longer exhibit the "nervous, fidgety first reaction" which sent them rushing out to construct power lines to head off installation of REA projects.

Red Cross Motor Corps Holds Monthly Session

The Motor Corps of the District Chapter of the American Red Cross held its monthly luncheon yesterday at the Highlands. Mrs. Howard Krinbill, chairman, presided, and Otto Lund, chapter manager, Gen. F. R. Keefer, chairman of the chapter, and Mrs. Benjamin F. Jones were speakers.

Present were Mrs. Karl Schmitt, Mrs. A. Harris, Miss Gertrude Aldrich, Mrs. Lee Hendricks, Mrs. Dixie Wright, Mrs. William McCrahon, Mrs. Samuel Broadbent, Mrs. Kenneth Sullivan, Mrs. Frederick Weithamer, Mrs. H. J. Brunsman, Miss Violet Palmer and Mrs. T. L. Turner.

WILLIAM A. FREDERICK, landscape gardener for the United States Botanical Gardens, tonight will address a meeting of representatives of the Woman's Council of the Federation of Churches, the Garden Clubs of Washington and of the Juvenile Court, at a meeting at the headquarters of the Federation of Churches, 1749 N street. The gathering will be one of those planned preliminary to the alley flower box project being sponsored by the Woman's Council.

The garden clubs of the city are co-operating in the plan of providing flower boxes, seeds and plants to both children and adults in the alleys. The project is to be carried out under the Juvenile Court department of the council, of which Mrs. Thomas J. Howerton is chairman and Miss Etta Mai Russell, the professional worker.

Back of the plan is a purpose not only to share beauty with those in sections where there are few, if any, gardens, but also to "teach the children the lessons of God's law as it is revealed in the growth of the seed, and the gardener's part in the careful preparation of the soil and the care of the plant as it grows," said Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, council president.

Before the flower boxes are given or the plants and seeds provided for them, the children and their parents will be gathered together in the various alleys to hear an explanation of the significance of their little gardens.

League of Republican Women Grows in Members and Funds

From 400 Group Has Waxed to 750 in Year Under Mme. Cantacuzene's Administration; Banquet Tuesday to Provide Summer Expenses.

Growth in membership and substantial increase in the treasury have marked the first year of Mme. Cantacuzene's administration as president of the League of Republican Women, reports of officers and committee chairmen indicated yesterday at the annual meeting at the Mayflower.

The league has grown from a membership of less than 400 to more than 750, with Mrs. Warren R. Austin, chairman of the membership committee. The league started the year 1937-38 in its new clubhouse, with sufficient money ahead to cover the rent for two years, collected by its president. A sum for the rent for another year is to be raised immediately, according to the plan proposed by the advisory board of which Mrs. Edward Everett Gann is chairman.

The operating expenses of the clubhouse, $1,959.04, have also been met, according to the report of Mrs. William Morton Grinnell, treasurer, and, in addition, $250 has been cleared by the weekly silver teas at the clubhouse for members and guests. The summer expenses have been covered by the proceeds of the banquet scheduled for Thursday, for which 200 reservations have been made. Senator Warren R. Austin and Representative Ralph O. Brewster will be the speakers.

Mrs. George Madden Grimes is the banquet chairman and Mrs. Frank Mondell in charge of the receiving line. Mrs. Grimes remarked in tribute to Mme. Cantacuzene that "if there were 48 hours in the day, she wouldn't need any committees to help her." Republicans from Maryland and Virginia as well as the District will attend.

Mrs. Charles M. Lea reported on the morning forum meetings which were conducted under her chairmanship and which will be resumed in the fall.

The information bureau which was inaugurated a few weeks ago under the direction of Mrs. M. Webster Dawley, has met with enthusiastic response throughout the country. Not only have names for the mailing list been pouring in, but contributions have also come to the amount of $1,200. The bureau is now sending out weekly bulletins with information on national issues and speeches on important measures before Congress.

On the recommendation of the advisory committee, the league voted to join other women's Republican clubs of the United States in forming a Federation. "Unity is what we need more than anything else at present," declared Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker. Presidents of the various State organizations would form an advisory council to meet with the Republican National Committee.

To Give Dinner.

Contract Bridge

Double-Squeeze.

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

A hold-up play, properly calculated, is a form of insurance, but it does not follow that it is applicable to all situations. The object of a hold-up is, of course, to exhaust one of the defenders in the suit led, so that he will not be able to communicate in that suit with his partner. I have seen this play used on many occasions when it should have been obvious that this "exhausting process" could not be consummated. In such cases, a hold-up is not only futile but may interfere with another opportunity. Consider South's problem in the hand shown below.

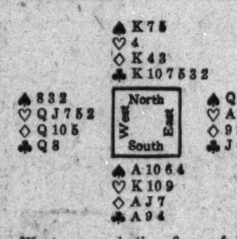
The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 N T	Pass	3 N T	Pass
Pass	Pass

South's notrump was a shade light but still the best bid on his well-balanced hand. North, it should be noted, did not waste time or effort with his minor suit. In the knowledge that South had at least three cards in the club suit, North properly jumped to three notrump.



West opened the five of hearts. East played the Ace and returned his own fourth-best, the three spot. Declarer carefully noted the heart spots involved. Counting the four in dummy, it was obvious that West's lead had been from no longer than a five-card suit. Since East had four hearts, obviously it would be impossible to exhaust him of hearts by holding up the king. Such a play would not be a safety measure and might easily cost a trick, since, if everything went well, it might be unnecessary to concede even one more trick to the enemy.

On this reasoning declarer won the second heart lead with the king, discarding a spade from dummy, laid down the club ace and led another club to the king. The queen and jack dropping, declarer could then afford to "fool around" and acquire certain information. He led a low spade from dummy's king. East played the jack (which was significant of honor-splitting), and declarer won with the ace. He then led back to the spade king and ran off the club suit. On the third round East discarded a diamond and West a spade, while declarer himself followed. On the fourth round East let go a heart, declarer a spade and West a heart. On the fifth round East reduced to three diamonds and the high spade, declarer discarding a diamond and West a heart, West's hoding at this point being the heart queen and the Q-10-5 of diamonds. The last club completed a double squeeze. East had to hold his high spade and, therefore, could keep only two diamonds. Declarer now let go his last spade, and it was West's turn to be pinched. He could not let go the heart queen without establishing declarer's ten-spot, and was forced to reduce to two diamonds. Declarer now merely had to lead his diamond ace and return the jack, overtaking with dummy's king, in order to cash the four-spot for the final trick, and an excellent match-point score.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

AMERICAN MECCA.

If you stand long enough in the rotunda of the Capitol, you will eventually see everyone you know . . . They used to say that about the corner of Forty-second and Broadway, but it's truer now of Washington.

* * * *

Two million tourists a year come to the Capital of the Republic, and that divides up to about 4,000 for each Senator and Representative . . . Luckily, a few of them don't look up their Congressmen.

Mrs. Fred Biermann. . . . World Record.

But the lawmakers love it . . . Washington combines the easy hospitality of the West and South . . . The dourest lawmaker becomes a good host.

Usually the visitor gets a little more of the sights and wonders than he had bargained for. Washingtonians are inured and hardened to marble halls; it's the stranger who gets sore feet.

"—the Capitol is the crossroads"

In skittish herds, like young antelope, they come in busses, flivvers, day coaches, thousands of youngsters, to look down the throat of democracy.

Ten minutes and they've done the Senate; out they troop from the gallery, while an orator pauses in midsentence to throw an injured look at them.

* * * *

They've saved their dimes, some of them since their sophomore years; given dances, band concerts, raffles, dramas, so they can come and ogle the masterminds and get a mental image of where and how the taxes go.

Some of them will return here later to make the laws and run the Republic. Or at least they will be insiders and oracles on government the rest of their lives.

* * * *

In the Washington home the guest room is in some respects the most important room . . . It gets the best beds and furnishings, at least . . . Or the davenport in the living room, or a cot or two, offer the weary tourist repose.

Washington families entertain more "house" guests a year per family, than any town in the country . . . Come June 15 there will be four to six out-of-towners nesting in many a five or six room home, with ringside seats for the greatest show on earth. (Especially if Congress is still in session.)

* * * *

Every Congressman signs hundreds of letters admitting constituentz to a little better glimpse of things than the benighted citizen who forgets he has a Congressman.

Without a letter you see only the basement of the White House; with one, you're O.K. for a peek at the parlors and dining room on the main floor.

A sort of a world record was established by the handsome wife of Congressman Fred Bierman, of Iowa, when she made 14 trips to Mount Vernon in one month with visiting sight-seers . . . Fortunately, she likes Mount Vernon and it's a nice drive. Guide to the sight-seers from back home is a No. 1 role for most Congressmen's wives.

* * * *

And luckily, the Washington scene is hypnotic, enchanting, kaleidoscopic . . . There is always a statesman sitting in the cocktail bar where you stop in for an orangeade, and always a chance for a glimpse of Eleanor Roosevelt galloping along the bridle paths in Rock Creek or Potomac Parks.

It is never the same two days in a row; Congress offers a new performance daily; even the Washingtonians never get bored with it.

So the patience of the hosts and hostesses never flags, or almost never; and the supply of guests and tourists is never exhausted.

They never tire of looking at Washington, as one never tires of looking at a beautiful, vivacious woman . . . Even a few days with her are better than nothing; and if the guest goes away with a little mental chromo of the Capital's beauty and endless variety, of the power and magnitude of the Republic, the host is pleased.

He has shared his ringside seat at the best show of 1938, and he can catch up on sleep later.

Citizens Fear Favoritism in Parking Lots

Death Penalty Is Backed for Assault With a Weapon.

Discrimination in use of municipal parking lots with Government employes tending to become favored customers would prevail unless parking facilities for all District motorists can be provided simultaneously, the Manor Park Citizens Association declared last night.

That and other reasons were advanced in an association resolution as bases for its oppostiion to a bill introduced by Representative Dirksen to set up a system of municipal parking lots.

The resolution cited the association's traditional opposition to use of gasoline tax funds for other than highway purposes and stated that creation of parking sites would eliminate taxable property for use of motorists without providing for "equitable" Federal compensation.

The association expressed doubt that the lots would be self-sustaining but would provide cheap parking facilities which would be monopolized by groups best able to exert pressure for their exclusive use. These groups, the association said it believed, would tend to be Government workers.

In other resolutions the association opposed:

The proposal of the Commissioners for converting the old tuberculosis hospital on Upshur street into a receiving home for children when, and if, the present home is abandoned.

The death penalty for conviction of assault with a dangerous weapon, at the same time urging stiffer penalties and fewer opportunities for parole.

Change in the alcohol beverage control law which would limit property owner consideration in license issuance to those within 600 feet of the proposed establishment rather than residents in the "neighborhood," as now provided.

Other resolutions approved Senator King's bill for transfer of auto records from the recorder of deeds office to the Traffic Bureau and authorized a contribution to the Police Boys Club fund while expressing the opinion that the clubs should come under the Community Chest and there are too many campaigns for money.

Dupont Circle Citizens

The Dupont Circle Citizens Association, meeting yesterday afternoon at the Mayflower Hotel, adopted resolutions asking the District Commissioners to ban bicycle riding on sidewalks and requesting the Traffic Bureau to study the need of traffic lights on Sheridan Circle. The association heard a talk on smoke regulation by H. K. Kugel, smoke inspector.

Officers were nominated to be elected at the next meeting. They were Woodson P. Houghton, president; William Floyd Crosby, first vice president; Dr. Henry A. Garfield, second vice president; Rowland S. Marshall, secretary, and W. Herbert Gill, treasurer. Nominated for the executive committee were Miss Margaret Delano Gage, Col. Spencer Cosby, Frank C. Baldwin and Maj. L. M. Leisenring.

Takoma Park, D. C.

A three-point program addressed to the District Suffrage Association, recommending national representation, "a Republican form of local government" and the right to sue and be sued in Federal courts, was approved at a meeting last night of the Citizens Association of Takoma, D. C., held at Takoma School auditorium.

The association opposed the Palmisano-King bill, which modifies certain provisions of the A. B. C. act, and approved postponement of registration date for automobiles.

W. C. Magathan, elected president for his seventh consecutive term, was presented with a gladstone bag in recognition of his work in the last six years. Other officers chosen are: R. H. Fiedler, first vice president; L. A. Jones, second vice president; W. M. Greene, secretary; C. C. King, corresponding secretary; N. C. McIndoo, treasurer, and delegates to the Federation, Fiedler and Greene.

Bladensburg Road Unit

The Bladensburg Road Citizens Association meeting at the Church of Christ, Twenty-eighth street and Douglas street northeast, last night heard John Nolan, jr., of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, describe the highway plans for the territory east of Bladensburg road. Improvements discussed by Nolan would include extensions of New York and Oklahoma avenues as well as Fort drive.

A nominating committee, headed by Mrs. F. L. Rogers, and an auditing committee under chairmanship of Walter S. Ahlberg, were appointed. The association accepted nine new members.

Progressive Citizens

Forest Hills Ass'n

Opposition to the proposed racetrack and pari-mutuel betting in the District and to amendments to the A. B. C. bill was recorded last night by the Forest Hills Citizens Association, meeting at Ben Murch School.

The association approved a motion by Edward C. Potter providing for a questionnaire to determine the type of suffrage desired for the District.

Worried Dentist Calls Firemen to Cut Off Gas Heat

At about 10 p. m. he remembered it, recalling, also, that the thing was liable to blow up if not turned off. From that time until shortly after 1 a. m. he tried to get into the building, which was closed. He tried to reach the janitor on the telephone, but couldn't. He tried to reach all building officials, but couldn't.

Then he thought of the fire department. The department sent around a hook and ladder truck. Up went a ladder to the sixth floor. A fireman climbed in the laboratory window and shut off the gas. Lloyd went home and slept soundly.

G. W. Lecturer Weighs Federal Trade Planning

British Professor Holds First of Series of Round Tables.

Industrial democracies have entered upon a period when Government intervention in economic activity on an increasing scale in the whole range of economic enterprise is obviously inescapable, it was argued in a round table discussion conducted by Prof. Harold J. Laski, of the London School of Economics, at George Washington University last night.

The questions concerning government intervention which, it was brought out, must be solved are: Toward what ends and values in social life should government intervention aim and what are the methods and institutions through which intervention can most adequately and wisely achieve those ends?

Farm Planning Cited.

The most vital process, it was felt, is to organize information, dramatize it for the electorate and implement it through legislation. Some of the participants expressed the opinion that since planning has been successfully applied in so difficult a field as agriculture through the application of data gathered over a long period of time, with the necessary data available industry would respond even more readily to planning and control.

The necessity for national planning over the whole field of economic activity was recognized. The necessity for safeguarding democratic activity was recognized. The necessity for safeguarding democratic processes was emphasized.

Prof. Laski expressed fear, however, that the time lag inherent in the process of fact finding would automatically condemn planning to failure.

Foreign Policy Next.

Taking part in the round table were members of Congress, economists and financial, legal and technical advisers of the Federal Government.

The conference was the first of three to be conducted by Prof. Laski, under the general heading, "America and the Future of Democracy," in his two-week stay in Washington as visiting lecturer at George Washington University.

The second round table, tomorrow night, will be devoted to the subject of executive control of foreign policy.

Prof. Laski will speak today at noon before the Washington Chapter of the National Lawyers Guild at the National Press Club. Seats will be available until that hour.

Accident Blamed For the Suicide of Garage Man of 20

Worry over a recent automobile accident was advanced last night as a possible reason for the suicide of 20-year-old Edwin B. Byer, of the Alban Towers Apartments. The youth was found dead of carbon monoxide poisoning yesterday in the Bethesda garage, where he worked as filling station attendant.

According to police, Byer struck a sign post in Bethesda Sunday night while driving a car belonging to the Hammond Motor Co., the firm which employed him. No charges were brought, but police believe he may have brooded over the incident.

D.C. Medical Body Enters GHA Case

Seeking to protect its interests, the District Medical Society yesterday obtained from Justice Peyton Gordon in District Court permission to file a brief as "friend of the court" in the impending legal battle between Group Health Association, Inc., and District and Federal authorities.

The brief will not be filed until after J. Beach Moor, superintendent of insurance for the District, has filed a reply to the G. H. A. request for a declaratory judgment.

Moor's answer will be filed shortly by the Corporation Counsel, which has alleged that the G. H. A. is an insurance corporation without a license. After his answer is filed, the medical society will reply with a brief that is intended to aid the court in arriving at a decision.

Jiu Jitsu, 'The Gentle Art,' Too Hard on Instructor's Pants

Left—And the big professor of jiu jitsu winced, bent, squirmed and gave himself up as Nancy Scott caught him with his own hold—which he had just taught her. The professor, Leo Batten, third-degree master in jiu jitsu and a guard in the Munitions Building here, will teach the art to the Interior Department Recreation Association. Right—The old throat hold—that got the professor. The pressure is being applied by Miss Nancy Scott in the second evolution of jiu jitsu, as taught by Batten to Interior Department employes.

The mysteries of jiu jitsu were opened to Interior Department employes yesterday with one strange interlude—when the trousers of Leo Batten, the jiu jitsu professor, parted as he hurled his subject, Tommy Hampton, a Cherokee Indian, to the mat.

The incident occurred shortly after Hampton was seized by Batten in demonstration of how the weakest man might throttle and subdue the most ferocious. The indulgence of the audience—sprinkled with Interior's ladies—was obtained and Batten returned from the dressing room in new tights to hurl Hampton again to the mat.

So did Interior employes, assembled under auspices of the Interior Department Recreation Association, obtain their first glimpse of jiu jitsu, its perils and results. They will hold sessions certainly once a week, in which Batten, a third degree master in jiu jitsu, will instruct.

Batten hasn't been long with the Government. He is stationed as a guard at the Munitions Building. The I. D. R. A. heard of his talents and brought him in yesterday to open the series of lessons in self-defense by jiu jitsu manipulations. Batten was 15 minutes delayed in arriving and an additional 10 minutes were required for him to don his mat clothes. In the interlude, Ian Forbes, of the National Park Service, was sent in to amuse the impatient crowd. He put on a highland fling, dancing around the mat where Tommy Hampton, of the Indian Office, was resting until Batten appeared.

Batten lectured first. The principles are a balance and leverage, he said. A jiu jitsu artist easily can stop the circulation of blood, can puncture the intestines, can crack the skull, can disarm a hold-up man, can, if sufficiently skilled, subdue three men. With a single pressure on secret nerves, the most determined scoundrel is brought to terms.

All through the audience men and women felt of the nerve. The Indian, Hampton, felt of his nerve, as if in preparation for the ordeal. Then he rose.

"I may say without fear of contradiction, not one in a 100,000 in all America has learned to execute any of its maneuvers," said the professor, seizing Hampton.

There was a fleeting gesture of professor against Indian—and through the air Hampton sped with the greatest of ease to land, with a slightly surprised look, on the mat.

"Movement one," said the professor. "But just a moment; I ask your indulgence; something has occurred." His hand crept behind him. "I won't be long," he said, leaving. Back in the arena, and wearing new nether apparel, he went on:

"Strange as it sounds, the weakest man or woman may crush the chest of the strongest man, strangle him, even jerk his leg completely from the socket. Any nerve center can be acted upon, causing numbness, torn ligaments, even blindness . . . Yet the name jiu jitsu means gentle art' . . . It does not produce a bruise . . ."

In the ensuing hour, Hampton hit the mat some 36 times by actual count—but his trousers held, and in this respect at least he had it on the professor. A few girls tried out the art, but were not permitted to take all the falls because they didn't come in gym clothes and Batten had demonstrated that it takes tough togs.

One Captain, 2 Lieutenants and 3 Sergeants Will Be Created for Station.

A new police precinct, to be designated No. 13, will be carved out of the Second Precinct July 1, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, announced last night. Promotions of six policemen, creating one new captain, two lieutenants and three sergeants, will accompany the move.

Upon completion of renovation now in progress at the Second Precinct Station, the new precinct will be installed with a completely new set of books and records. The station is being changed to include a captain's office, a room for detectives and a room for clerks of the Thirteenth Precinct.

This precenct will take from jurisdiction of the Second Precinct the area bounded by First street northeast and Fifteenth street northwest from S street northwest to Euclid street northwest. The Second Precinct will be narrowed to include the area between First street northeast and Fifteenth street northwest from K street northwest to S street northwest.

Prisoners of the Thirteenth Precinct will be locked up in Second Precinct Station cells when they can be accommodated there. Should the Second Precinct need all of its guest facilities, Thirteenth Precinct prisoners will be booked there and distributed among nearby stations.

The new arrangement, Maj. Brown said, will be adopted until arrangements can be made to transfer the Woman's Bureau from its present quarters at Fifth and M streets northwest, when the Thirteenth Precinct will occupy that building. Plans to transfer the Woman's Bureau to the old Police Court Building were discarded when the court building was condemned as a fire hazard.

Labor Leader Scores Senate For Switches on Merger Bill

'Double-Crossing and Dirty Dealing' Worst He Has Seen in 20 Years, Coleman Tells Central Labor Union.

"Double crossing and dirty dealing" put the reorganization bill through the Senate, Frank J. Coleman, secretary of the Central Labor Union, told delegates last night at a meeting in Typographical Temple.

A member of the legislative conference board of the A. F. of L., Coleman said, "I've been around Capitol Hill for 20 years, but I never saw anything like this before."

Several Senators pledged to fight the reorganization measure switched their votes at the last minute, he charged, while organizations working with the A. F. of L. against the bill withdrew their opposition when "sops were passed out."

The legislation now pending before the House is different in wording from the Senate bill but "just as bad, if not worse," Coleman said.

The District Board of Education and Superintendent of Schools Frank Ballou drew severe censure in two resolutions unanimously approved by delegates.

Stating that "school officials in Washington have been curbed in their antisocial practices only by Congress," the first resolution opposed "any move to give further power to the Board of Education and their superintendant until the board is elected by all the people it is supposed to serve."

The resolution affirmed faith in an elected school board as an "important step in our general program to make free citizens of residents of the Distriet of Columbia."

The covering report from the committee on education characterized the board of education as "uniformly opposed to constructive standards asked for by labor . . . determined to interpret and administer laws passed by Congress in a manner to distort the obvious intent of Congress, as was done in connection with the bill in regard to vocational education passed several years ago.

"At no time has a representative of labor been allowed to sit on the board of education," the report said.

Another resolution warned that any attempt by Dr. Ballou "directly or through subterfuge to set aside, evade, or disregard the teachers salary law" would find the Central Labor Union blocking him "in every legal way."

Parole Board Wins Test of Power to Revoke Clemency

Seal Drafts Bill for D.C. Civil Service

Preference on Jobs to Be Given to Local Residents.

Legislation for an independent Civil Service Commission for the District as recommended by the Prettyman Committee, was drafted yesterday by Corporation Counsel Elward H. Seal. The bill will be sent to the Commissioners for approval before submission to Congress.

At the same time, Seal also drafted legislation for appointment of an additional police court judge, which already has been approved by the Commissioners.

Under District civil service, only residents of the city or those within a 12-mile radius of the District would be eligible for appointment It was explained that District residents now find it difficult to obtain Federal jobs, since the District quota is "more than full."

Local Preference Urged.

Another point brought out was that residents of the city should have preference at local jobs.

In the Prettyman recommendations, a civil service board consisting of three members would be appointed by the Board of Commissioners from among District officials in other positions, to serve without additional compensation. It is expected that the general plan as outlined in the report would be followed.

In regard to the out-of-town holders of municipal jobs, the report stated, "the registered lists of the Civil Service Commission are made up of persons who reside in all parts of the United States, the appointment of many of whom to District positions is inconvenient and unsatisfactory.

Separate Register.

"Moreover, many of the functions of the municipality call for qualifications materially different from the requirements of the Federal Government."

A separate register for the purpose of the District government was recommended to give "preference to District residents and with qualifications for the peculiar work of the municipality."

The item for an additional judge in Police Court previously has been requested by the Commissioners in order to facilitate handling of jury cases in that court. This was not recommended in the report.

2 Boys and Girl Set Out With 32 Cents for Texas

Setting out for Texas with a total of 32 cents, two 10-year-old boys and a girl aged 11 got as far as Falls Church yesterday—and ended their adventure last night back home in Washington.

The three wanderers were Leo Mohme and his sister, Nancy, of 2032 Otis street northeast, and Leo's classmate, Frank Baumann, jr., of 1805 Lawrence street northeast. All three go to John Burroughs School.

Leo and Nancy left a not for their mother, Mrs. Zina Mohme, that "we're going to Texas—don't worry." Accompanied by Frank, they started out yesterday morning on a 1,500-mile hike to where their grandfather has a farm.

Nancy was dressed in a pair of trousers belonging to her brother. "We didn't think we'd get caught so quick if she looked like a boy," explained Leo.

Heading in the general direction of Texas, the trio became hungry before long and stopped at a farm near Falls Church.

A short time later, they were picked up trudging along the road by Henry T. McGarity, deputy sheriff of Fairfax County, and Paul E. Brown, Commonwealth's attorney.

Night Club Girl Ends Life After Row With Man

Ruth Dolly Duff, 19yearold night club entertainer, killed herself with illuminating gas in the apartment of a friend at 1719 Twentieth street northeast, early yesterday, following an argument.

Her body, fully clad, was found on the kitchen floor of the apartment by Theodore Watkins, 30-year-old salesman, who told police he hed left the flat before midnight. The girl died shortly before 3 a. m. Efforts of the Fire Rescue Squad to revive her were futile.

Watkins told detectives that he had met the attractive, auburn-haired girl in a Baltimore night club where she worked. Sunday, he stated, they had dinner together and became involved in an argument. Watkins left the girl in his apartment when he went out.

A note was found in the apartment saying, "I have been just a fool. Forgive me."

Daredevil Tells How It Is Done For the Movies

Veteran Race Driver Gets Money and Thrills for Risking His Neck.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, April 4.—A tall, good-looking man with blue eyes and graying temples named Cliff Bergere reported today that he has three ways of making money in the movies:

1. Playing in small bit parts.
2. Renting his super-super roadster for $50 a day.
3. Taking a chance on breaking his neck, at $250 up per chance.

Bergere is one of the greatest auto race drivers in the business, but between whirls on the Indianapolis Speedway, where he has been in the money in seven of his last ten starts, he's got to keep busy.

"So mostly I smash up cars for the films," he said. "That pays the best and I don't think it's particularly dangerous. At least I've never been hurt doing it."

Bergere's last job was sending a sedan careening around a corner and turning it over a couple of time, while traveling at 50 miles an hour. He did it for R-K-O's "Blind Alibi."

"It's a little hard to turn over a car these days," he said. "They're too well balanced. One of the best methods is to get your car going about 50 miles an hour, slam over the steering wheel and skid into the curb broadside. It also helps to have your rear tire—the one that hits the curb—half deflated."

Look Out for Fire!

Berger wears a safety belt, such as aviators use, and he makes sure that there is no glass in the windows of his machine. Neither does he carry an ounce more gasoline than he needs.

"The principal hazard is fire," he explained. "That's because you haven't enough hands and feet to turn off the ignition while you yourself are turning over. So I seldom have more than a pint of gas in the tank."

"If they want me to roll down into a ravine, or wrap my car around a telephone pole or something like that," he said, "I charge more. The movies seem to be willing to pay me on the basis of how nearly I come to getting killed."

Bergere got into the movie-stunt business years ago, when dirt track managers dreaded to see his face.

"I was a youngster then," he said, "and I had a heavy foot. I smashed up so many machines on the tracks that my friends said I ought to do it for the movies and get paid to boot.

"I kept on racing, but between times I tried movie stunting. One of my first jobs, I remember, was that of a chariot smasher in De Mille's 'Ten Commandments.'

Was in Serials.

He also tried his hand at jumping from trains to planes and vice versa, in such opuses as "The Perils of Pauline" and eventually became a specialist in wrecking automobiles beyond repair. He's ruined some 200 cars to date, including 42 which he made do somersaults. In most of these wrecking scenes Bergere carries a couple of movie passengers—but he is the only live occupant of the machine. The passengers invariably are dummies.

Driving tip: If, when riding in your own automobile, you go into a skid and see that you are about to turn over, Bergere advises gripping the wheel with one hand and bracing yourself with the other against the roof.

"Do that, and a turnover in a modern steel car is not as dangerous as a skid in your bath tub," he said.

The roadster Bergere rents to the movies is an ultra-de luxe straight eight, with a hood 6 feet long and so much chromium work that the Polish manufacturers declared extra dividends when he bought it.

"Last time I rented it was to Twentieth Century-Fox for a Shirley Temple picture," he said. They kept it four days, at $50 a day, and during all that time they drove it only 10 feet. I didn't charge them a cent extra for the gasoline."

Bergere has been injured only once during his daredevil career. "And that was when I was swimming in the Atlantic for my own pleasure," he said. "A big wave hit me and dislocated my shoulder."

She Laughed.

When Joan Crawford giggled at Arthur Treacher's comical antics on the set of "No More Ladies," the director added comedy lines for him in the picture, and since then the 6-foot 3-inch Englishman has done nothing but comedy, mostly as a butler.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

A Veteran Reasserts Right to Eminence As One of the Films' Foremost Actors

Lewis S. Stone Still One of the Cinema's Most Able Mimes, After Many Decades of Fine Endeavor; a Screen Star Calls on a Stage Star; New Theater Club Being Formed; Previews Hold Swift Pace.

SOME 25 years ago, a vigorous young actor, in the heyday of his mimetic powers, appeared on the stage of the National Theater in the principal male role in "The Misleading Lady."

He was heralded as an actor who had come up from a long course of sprouts under the direction of the late David Belasco, on the West Coast, and as one of the most able players identified with the old Daly Stock Co., in New York.

BELL.

This dark-haired and vibrant young fellow gave an exceedingly good account of himself in the guise of Jack Craigen, the dominant figure in a comedy-drama that represented little more than a modernized transcript of Mr. Will Shakespeare's riotous farce of "The Taming of the Shrew."

Having been born in Worcester, Mass., on November 15, 1878, this stalwart young actor now is crowding 60. His hair is a little thinner and a little whiter than it was back there in 1913 and the lines in his finely hewn face have deepened a little. But he still is a fine actor—one of the most competent interpreters of elderly character roles to be found in the length and breadth of Hollywood's expansive areas.

His name is Lewis S. Stone and he has been military man as well as actor. There is a quality of authority and a precision about all that he does on either stage or screen that suggests that Mr. Stone instinctively embodies something of the fiber that makes for a leader of men.

All this leads up, of course, to the fact that Lewis Stone appears in the pivotal elderly role in "Judge Hardy's Children," previewed by the drama desks yesterday and coming to the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday. Mr. Stone does his customarily fine job in this subject—in concert with Mickey Rooney, Cecilia Parker and the others who have been identified with this engaging series of celluloid dramas since its inception—and came by his assignment more or less by accident.

The role of Judge Hardy was originally deemed a fine outlet for the sterling talents of Lionel Barrymore, oldest of the "royal family." Mr. Barrymore, however, happened to be in England, contributing his gifts to Robert Taylor's "A Yank at Oxford," when the present "Hardy" opus came up in the studio. The logical substitute for the paternal role was Lewis Stone. So there he is. Many of us who remember Mr. Stone a quarter of a century back are glad of it—with all due respect to the eldest of the Barrymores, who, incidentally, happens to be the best surviving actor of his clan.

With the preview unspooling of the "Hardy" item there was unreeled an introductory glimpse of the opening chapters of the new serial that is to bring the progressive form of screen entertainment around the corner from Ninth street into F. To the screen of Loew's Columbia Theater, to be exact. This emergence of the serial into "big time" is a bit in the nature of a revolutionary move on the part of the Loew high command in the Capital, marshaled, of course, by Division Manager Carter Barron.

The serial is a much maligned form of cinematic diversion. It is the backbone of much of the independent operation on the West Coast. I mean to say that more than one company that is never heard of in the opulent first-run film outleis sustains itself by the mass bookings of the serials it frabricates with unfailing regularity and considerable skill in the matter of suspended interest.

There comes to mind, for instance, the time when a cinema star of the first rank was hired for a single day by an obscure Hollywood producer. He was worked in an amazing number of scenes—but still only for a single day. When that day was finished the producer remarked: "Well, that didn't take long, but we got 'shots' enough of So-and-So to have him in every reel of a 20-episode chapter play." Tricks in all trades.

So the "Best of the Month" bob again in the April issue of that Will H. Hays monthly brochure bearing the title of "Selected Motion Pictures." Washington, on this occasion, stands in a less favorable position than usual to judge the justice of the appraisals. Only one of the three "best" has been seen here and that is "Merrily We Live," the completely goofy comedy that somehow brings back vague recollections of "My Man Godfrey."

The other two are "The Adventures of Marco Polo," starring Gary Cooper and introducing his new "imported" leading woman, Sigrid Gurie—imported from Brooklyn by way of Sweden, or some one of the Scandinavian countries, unless I have my memory on crooked—and "Mad About Music," the new Deanna Durbin vehicle for Universal, which Washington anticipates with especial eagerness since the ingenuous Miss Durbin's recent brief visit to the Capital.

There was another visitor to Washington from the realm of the gelatins over the week-end, in the person of Sara Haden, distinguished character actress of the screen.. Miss Haden happens to be the daughter of that former local stock favorite, Charlotte Walker, importantly cast in "You Can't Take It With You," now in its second week at the National, and was a backstage caller upon her mother Sunday night.

That extra Sabbath evening performance of the Moss Hart-George S. Kaufman Pulitzer Prize-winning comedy, by the way, provided a "money" house. While there were seats to be had on the orchestra floor, the two balconies were sold out. The hilarious piece seems headed for a nice two weeks' gross on E street—something that other producers might bear in mind to their advantage, and ours.

There seems to be something in the nature of a "junior Variety Club" in process of formation.

The younger set of the local motion picture industry has formed a social club to promote good fellowship along film row and among all the picture theaters in the Capital's metropolitan area. Their first essay at a social evening will be celebrated Saturday night from 10:30 p. m. to 2 a. m. in the rooms of the Theater Arts Display Company, 212 H street northwest.

At last week's organization meeting, David Ginsberg was elected president; Roy Dial, head of the D. C. Poster Co., vice president, and Miss Alberta McConnell, secretary. Mr. Ginsberg and Miss McConnell both are executives of the Sidney B. Lust organization in Washington.

A charter membership of at least 50 is expected at the next business session, to be held on April 7. A name for the club will be adopted at that time. Arrangements, so I am told, already are under way to establish permanent clubrooms.

• • • •

We will all burn up today. At 1:30 p. m., by the clock, there will be a preview screening of "In Old Chicago," in which Tyrone Power, Alice Faye and Alice Brady are cast in the principal roles. This recreation of the Chicago fire of 1871 recently was run off in the auditorium of the National Press Club before an especially assembled audience of approximately 1,000 persons. They are still trying to clear the smoke out of the place!

Misery-Loves-Company Note.

I may be having a time with that Willard black kitten, but Mrs. O'Leary is one up on me in the matter of her cow!

Prints Worn By Lynn Bari In Turf Film

"Racing Blood," drama of the turf that provides Lynn Bari with an unusual romantic role, also provides Twentieth Century-Fox Designer Helen Myron with an opportunity to show the dashing effectiveness of prints played against monotone backgrounds, 1938 revivals of the Gibson Girl suit in pinstriped suiting with noval accessories of white pique, and a number of amusing accessories suitable for a story with a racing background.

Miss Myron, who has been experimenting very successfully for the last few months with the "print and plaid" idea, tops her former successes with a cape and dress ensemble for Lynn that dramatically uses a bordered print in colors of coral, turquoise, green, yellow and white against a black background.

This border is used on the skirt of the frock about 5 inches above the hem, with the same length achieved on the full-length cape, so that two borders meet when the costume is on. The top of the frock is all-black with high, draped neck and short draped sleeves, while the cape gains slight shoulder width and considerable grace by being slashed at the back near the shoulders and shirred in closely for about 6 inches on either side.

Kindle Interest in Burning Drama

SCREEN NEWCOMER AND OLD FAVORITES.

Left—Sigrid Gurie, the native-born Brooklyn girl who "arrived" in Hollywood as a widely heralded foreign "importation" to play the feminine lead opposite Gary Cooper in "The Adventures of Marco Polo," coming in due time to a Washington screen. Right (above) Tyrone Power and Alice Faye, as they appear in the Twentieth Century-Fox production of "In Old Chicago," which will follow "The Girl of the Golden West" at the Palace. Inset—Mickey Rooney, one of the ablest of the juvenile actors, featured with Lewis S. Stone in "Judge Hardy's Children," opening Friday at Loew's Capitol.

CORDELL HULL recently had his portrait painted by Leon Gordon. It will adorn the walls of the Department of State, where hang the portraits of his predecessors . . . During the days when Hull posed, he looked with great suspicion upon Gordon's activities, and observed every move carefully—because the playful Ulric Bell, head of the Washington bureau of the Louisville Courier-Journal, had whispered to Hull: "Be careful of Gordon. He's an international spy" . . . When Gordon learned of this, he told Hull: "Watch out for Bell. He's an amateur artist—strictly a Sunday painter" . . . Big Business Newest Theme In Hollywood

Directed by Henry Hathaway, who did "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" and "Souls at Sea," this one will costar George Raft with Georges Rigaud, two-fisted Argentine importation.

Paramount's "Men With Wings" and MGM's "Test Pilot," with Clark Gable and Spencer Tracy, both deal with the airplane manufacturing business.

"The Texans," with Randolph Scott and Joan Bennett, deals with the Texas cattle business following the Civil War.

"Men With Wings," directed by William Wellman, the man who did the early "Wings," traces the entire history of flying and plane manufacture in Technicolor from the time of the Wright Brothers, while "Test Pilot" confines itself to aviation's production department of today.

Frank Lloyd's "Wells Fargo," now screening around the country, has to do with the development of American transportation. Albert Lewin, who produced it, is also scheduled to do "Western Union," continuing the same theme.

Warner's "Gold Is Where You Find It," with George Brent and Olivia De Havilland, pictures gold mining in early California and the engineering development of the country at that time. The same studio will also do "Valley of the Giants," a lumber story.

In HOLLYWOOD With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., April 4.—Having seen so many folks go high hat, I'm a little bored with the whole—subject. But this is startling and unexpected. I've got to tell on him. He's the last one I'd ever have suspected. His hat's gone higher than any other in Hollywood.

HEDDA HOPPER.

It's Charles McCarthy. Did you know he had a brother? No, you didn't. He has. Made in his image and likeness with the added capacity of rolling his eyes. But created minus that vitally important asset—personality.

His name is Cass. He does the dirty work. He's Charlie's stand-in. When there's a swimming scene, and Charlie sinks to the bottom of the pool—that's not Charlie, that's Cass. All they do is sprinkle a little water on Charlie and he gets the close-up.

They had a scene the other day in a burning building. You could hear Cass' screams all over the studio. The flames were licking at the bedclothes. But Charlie only chuckled, the rat. Nobody gave a darn if Cass burned up. He's tried, oh, how he's tried to get to the broadcasting studio! He wouldn't mind being a stand-up or sit down if Lamour or any of those girls would take him on their laps. He's met Dorothy—only in the garden at his home. She turns disdainfully from him and kisses Charlie.

But in the quiet stillness of the night, Charlie has been heard to groan in despair. He knows that Cass is the skeleton in his closet.

Celebration of Joe Cawthorne's seventieth birthday was more than a party. It was a rebirth of tradition and spirit of getting together, old and young, people you don't see often enough.

In this city of vast distances, those you love most receive the worst treatment. Friends will understand. So you fritter away your time on unimportant, demanding ones.

You know yourself it's the weak who control the strong, because they have tenacity of purpose and never, never let go until they gain their point. When they do, nine times out of ten, you're destroyed.

But when you come into a house filled with friends—no petty jealousies, you feel humble and aglow, as I did.

There was Charlie Evans and his wife. He's 82. The shining look in Mrs. Evans' eyes, when Bryan Foy said, "I have a part for you in Kay Francis' new picture." Few people know his true worth. Imagine anyone producing 36 pictures a year. He does.

George Arliss and Arthur Byron were discussing problems of the theater. Arthur Byron is one of the two remaining survivors who originated the Actors' Equity, a Utopian idea and designed only to help those less fortunate than themselves.

Mrs. Frank Craven was telling us that her son John, 21, was admitted to the Players Club. John is a sensation with his father, Frank, in "Our Town," his first New York play. Then Arthur Byron, going back into his memory, said, "When I was taken into the Players Club, it was the greatest honor ever bestowed upon me. John Drew and Joseph Jefferson put me through. It was always a red-letter day when Mark Twain came in to play cards. His picturesque language and coined cuss words flowed along as though coming from a fountain. If I'd only had wit enough to write them down."

HandsomeLads Supplant Old Keystone Cops

Sounds a little on the silly side, but it's a fact, because the standard for the motion picture police officer is more rigid than that of any police department.

About 200 players comprise the motion picture "force" that never make an arrest. Last week "the force" was working in "Doctor Rhythm," with Bing Crosby. The stalwart guardians of the peace were supposed to be members of the New York force this time, although studio wardrobes are equipped to transform them into officers of just about every big city in the world.

To become a member of the Hollywood force, it's necessary to pass the hypercritical eyes of directors, and modern directors turn thumbs down on the old-fashioned flat foot type. Today's movie cop is young, stands 6 feet or better, is under 40, and wears from size 38 to size 42 clothing.

And he isn't the grizzled, battle-scarred veteran of the force. On the contrary, the modern director demands a clean-cut cop and on the handsome side.

Yanks Are Worried Over DiMaggio.

By Shirley Povich.

St. Pete is best known as (1) the winter home of the New York Yankees and (2) as a town in Florida. Why its founding fathers selected the place as a habitat is not quite clear, but there is a deep-rooted reason why the Yankees have been coming here for a dozen years. Those years have produced five pennants for the Yanks. The Yanks have taken a long lease on the St. Pete grounds. They aren't superstitious — just cautious.

POVICH.

But as the Yanks prepare for another pennant triumph, there is a disturbing note in the New York camp. The old Yankee swagger is missing. Not until Joe DiMaggio and Col. Ruppert settle their contract difficulties will the New York athletes be completely at ease. With DiMaggio, the Yankees believe that they are a sure thing. Without DiMaggio, well, they are not the New York Yankees.

Without DiMaggio to bang out those 40-odd home runs, a generous sprinkling of triples and his usual large order of two-baggers, the Yankees know they are not the 1-to-2 shot that bookmakers' odds have labeled them in the pennant race. The collection of that $5,000 world series split which loomed as a formality is now seriously threatened. The Yanks are hoping that DiMag will hurry up and join 'em.

But the DiMaggio-Ruppert salary squabble has long passed the publicity stunt stage. To the Yankee players, it is fearfully genuine. The Italian refuses to budge from his native San Francisco unless Ruppert ups his offer of $25,000 and the Yankee owner is apparently determined that there will be no further compromise.

There is evidence, too, that Ruppert is prepared to stick by his guns in the DiMaggio dealings. At this stage, last season, he defied Pitcher Red Ruffing in a salary squabble and Ruffing then was rated equally as great an asset to the Yankees as DiMaggio now is rated. Ruppert let Ruffing stew in his dissatisfaction until two weeks after the season started when the pitcher finally surrendered after the Yankees' owner proved unyielding.

DiMaggio's surrender, however, may not take place with the same rapidity as Ruffing's. The latter had no vocation aside from baseball, but the Italian outfielder is now the prosperous proprietor of a San Francisco restaurant which provides him a generous income. He is not utterly dependent on his baseball wages.

DiMaggio has probably been spoiled by his success in dealing with the Yankees. He demanded and received $8,000 in his first year in the majors, an unheard-of sum for a rookie ballplayer. And after his first successful season, he held out for a $15,000 contract in 1937, gaining that point also.

Now he wants $40,000, he says, although there is no doubt he is willing to settle for less. However, he has turned down flatly the $25,000 offer of Ruppert, and the Yankee owner is in no mood to improve that one.

* * * *

Ordinarily, his teammates might resent DiMaggio's demands, but in the interest of their own welfare they would like to see the Yankees sign DiMaggio at any price. They are quite captivated by the prospects of that "sure thing" pennant and its attendant World Series split, and the sooner DiMaggio is brought into the fold the better they can contemplate their own spoils.

There are two schools of thought on the subject of DiMaggio's salary. One holds that DiMaggio is entitled to all he can wheedle out of Ruppert; the other declares that there is no logical limit.

* * * *

"Why, DiMaggio's demand for $40,000 is absurd," said one baseball man today. "He wants more than Lou Gehrig is getting. It took Lou Gehrig 15 years to work up to his $39,000 salary with the Yanks and DiMaggio wants to jump into the same money inside of three years. It isn't fair to Gehrig, who has been a big shot star with the Yankees since '23."

"Gehrig doesn't have anything to do with DiMaggio's salary business with the Yankees," rejoined another. "DiMag can't be governed by what Gehrig is getting. If Lou couldn't get up in the really big money for 15 years, that's no fault of DiMaggio's. Nobody can blame Joe for taking that attitude, either. A ball player is never overpaid, because a club owner is not obliged to sign him."

There isn't much doubt of what DiMaggio represents to the Yankees. Without the fleet Italian to drag down hits in centerfield and provide the Yankees with the best throwing arm of any outfielder in the league, and lend his big punch to the Yanks' attack, the New York Club is not the same awe-inspiring crew of the past two years.

The Yanks are already gambling at second base where Joe Gordon is attempting to supplant Tony Lazzeri, and this year for the first time in 12 seasons in the South the Yankees have lost a series of exhibition games. Joe DiMaggio could allay a lot of fears that are sprouting in the Yankees' camp. His mates would like to see that No. 3 uniform come down off the wall and adorn the broad back of the lad from 'Frisco. They don't want to miss out on a sure thing.

Athletes Get Awards.

Merit awards in the form of baseball mitts, were presented today by Barney Neighborhood House, a Community Chest settlement at 470 N street southwest, to eight of their 200 boys who have held the highest key records for the past three months.

Nat Hurlers Hit Hard as Cards Win

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

St. Petersburg, Fla., April 4.—The Nats were left holding the bag today—all three bags, in fact—by mighty Zeke Bonura, who came to the plate with the bases loaded in the ninth inning and the Cardinals leading by three runs. Zeke hit into a game-ending double play and the Cardinals won, 11 to 8.

The Nats were threatening to snatch the game from the Cards in that ninth inning when Manager Frankie Frisch entrusted his three-run lead to Rookie Max Lanier, late of Columbus. With one out, the Washingtons quickly filled the bases on a single by Bluege and a pair of walks issued by the wavering Lanier.

Then up stepped Bonura, who was irked by a low pitch that was called a strike, and swung viciously at the next offering. The ball trickled back to Pitcher Lanier, who shot it home to Catcher Bremer whose heave to first beat the lumbering Zeke to that bag for a double play.

On the day when the Nats emerged from their protracted hitting slump, their pitching went sour and thus it was that the Cardinals won the ball game. Jimmy DeShong was no puzzle whatsoever to the Gas House Gang, who thumped him for ten hits and nine runs before Pete Appleton was rushed to his relief in the fifth.

All told, the Cardinals collected 15 hits off Appleton and DeShong while the Nats were accumulating 14 off Max Macon and Steve Henshaw, a pair of young left-handers, and the aforesaid Lanier. But two home runs, a triple and two doubles were mixed up in the Cardinals' blows while the Nats were dealing almost strictly in singles.

The Nats were off to a 2-0 lead in the first inning when Johnny Stone singled to right with the bases full, but the Cardinals were in front, 6-2, at the end of the second inning. After Enos Slaughter, the outfielder who helped Columbus to land—the 1937 American Association pennant—had reached DeShong for a home run in the first inning, the Gas Housers fell on him for five more in the second when he pitched two-baggers to Mize and Owen, a single to Macon, a triple to Gutteridge and walked a batter.

Aided by Lewis' Error.

They made it 9-2 in the fourth with the help of an error by Buddy Lewis but four solid singles were also mixed up in the new batch of Cardinal runs.

It was 11-3 at the end of the seventh, Jimmy Bucher having contributed a homer to the Cardinals' cause against Appleton, and then the Nats began to busy themselves against Henshaw. Bluege, Lewis, Travis and Stone banged out singles and with the help of Gutteridge's error they scored five runs in the eighth.

That made it 11-8 and you know about the ninth.

Ossie Bluege was no drawback to the Nats today. Stationed at second base in place of Buddy Myer and leading off the batting order, Bluege pounded out four singles and drew a walk in five trips to the plate.

There was solace for Bucky Harris, too, in the hitting of Johnny Stone, one of the Nats delinquents. Stone slammed out three slashing singles and a lengthy triple in five appearances.

Tonight the Nats returned to Orlando where tomorrow they encounter an off day before closing their Orlando camp with games against the Bees on Wednesday and Thursday. On Friday they move into Atlanta on their way North.

Hoyas Beat Vermont, 10-1

Bertrand, Petroskey Allow 4 Hits.

By Jack Munhall.

Combining alert play, timely hitting and the 4-hit pitching of Hank Bertrand and Mike Petroskey, Georgetown University's veteran nine opened its baseball season yesterday, trouncing the University of Vermont, 10 to 1, on the Hoya field.

Fifteen hundred fans, including Eddie Eynon, secretary of the Nats, watched Joe Judge's charges run their consecutive victory string to 13 games.

The Hoyas, touted as Georgetown's greatest team, lived up to all the things that have been said about them. They displayed a well-balanced squad, good pitching and an unusually stout defense. Their hitting, while not heavy, was timely, and the boys gave every indication that a few games will bring out their power.

The pitching of Petroskey and Bertrand was all that could be desired and a shutout which they justly merited was denied them only by an error of omission by Bertrand in the ninth inning. After Petroskey had doled out two singles and fanned five men, he turned over an 8-0 lead to Bertrand, who carried on in fitting style until the ninth.

Grounder Spells Run.

McDonough opened the final frame with a single to center and the play that cheated the Hoyas' hurlers of their shutout performance appeared in the form of an apparently innocuous grounder that Kimball knocked right into Bertrand's hands. With plenty of time to force McDonough at second, or possibly start a double play, Bertrand instead elected to throw to first to retire the Vermont first baseman. This he did, allowing McDonough to scamper unmolested to second.

Bertrand's mistake almost immediately caused him sorrow, for, after he had fanned Catcher Berry for the second out, Sunderland, 'Cat

Tow Beaten By Champ

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 4.—Bob Tow, of Alexandria, Va., was beaten by John Henry Lewis, light heavyweight champion, in 10 rounds at The Arena here tonight. But the only ones who really lost were the 7,500 who coughed up a sizeable sum to watch the waltz.

The action was so dull and monotonous that a great many gave up early and went home to sleep under more comfortable conditions.

The light heavyweight champion was far too good for the Alexandria boy, yet could do little with him. And it wasn't because he didn't try.

Lewis seemed to have a hankering to end it early but he never did get a clean shot at his unskilled, slow-footed opponent.

Lewis was putting all he had behind his shots yet outside of buckling Tow's knees for a second in the third round, the only damage he did was to mess up Tow's already flowery left ear in the ninth round.

Lewis' only effective weapon was a left hook to the body. Now and then he hooked it to the head.

As for Tow, he was willing but moved about like a novice. The real punches he landed could be counted on one hand. He caught Lewis in the ninth with a chopping right that opened a slight cut under the Negro's right eye.

Regal Beats FBI, 20-17, In Post Play

By Jack Munhall.

More than 1,200 spectators watched the Beverage five trounce W. W. Chambers, 47-31, in the opening contest for the 145-pound crown, after which Regal nosed out FBI, its bitter rival, 20-17, to lift the unlimited title from the G-Men.

Both games were thrillers from start to finish but the winners left no doubt as to their superiority. Columbia led Chambers after breaking an early 6-6 deadlock while Regal's close victory was its fifth decision over FBI in six meetings this season.

Trophies Are Presented.

After his team had beaten FBI, Pat Regal, owner and sponsor, received the seventh trophy, symbolic of the men's unlimited championship.

Tom Folliard, Regal forward, will be given a medal for being the highest scorer in the tournament.

The Regal-G-Men game was surprising in that only 37 points were scored by the two high-powered offensive outfits. One reason for the point famine was unusually close guarding, particularly by Regal; another was the wild, long-distance shooting which both were guilty of during the entire second half.

Regal Leads at Half.

The opening half was well-played and Regal left the court with a 13-9 advantage, which it never relinquished although it was anybody's game as late as the final three minutes. The teams roared into the homestretch with Regal holding only slim leads, yet never behind. With five minutes to go, the Clothiers were in the van, 19-13, but a free throw by Clem Bethel and a leaping one-handed basket by Jim Thompson reduced the margin to a single basket.

The count remained the same as the teams desperately heaved lengthy shots. Seconds before the final whistle, Ackey Viana clinched the victory for Regal with a snowbird, his first basket of the game.

Columbia Beverage's triumph was largely due to the ability of its members to follow up missed baskets. At least ten field goals were tallied on plays of this kind.

C. Pittiglio was the winners' leading scorer with 15 points. Temple Jarrel led the losers with 10.

Picard Receives Master's Check

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Picard's 285 Wins Masters'

Cooper and Guldahl Tie for Second With 287.

By the United Press.

Augusta, Ga., April 4.—Slender, black-haired Henry Picard, the "honey boy" professional from Hershey, Pa., and one of the most consistent shot-makers of golf, late today carded a two-under-par 70 for an aggregate of 285 and first money of $1,500 in the fifth annual Masters' tournament.

Picard's total for the 72 holes was three strokes under par and two better than the 287 made by Lighthorse Harry Cooper, Chicopee, Mass., and Ralph Guldahl, National Open champion from Chicago. The latter won $700 cash.

"Honey Boy Henry" won by shooting close to par 72—71-72-72-70—for each round. He took the lead at the three-quarters mark with 215 and ended this afternoon with a pace which was too hot for those who had been threatening.

Picard stayed close to regulation figures from the start while the other masters of the game were blowing hot and cold, going sensationally under par for a round only to blow up on the next one.

He rounded the turn on the final round in 32, four under par, and came home easier with a 38, two over par, but plenty good enough to win.

Picard, who only recently changed his grip, dropped his approach shots dead to the pin and then found the cups for par or better on each tour of the rolling Augusta National Golf course which duplicates many of the most difficult holes of famous world layouts.

Robert Tyre Jones, jr., Atlanta's Bobby, who was host for the tourney which is the only one in which he plays following his retirement in 1930 upon grand slamming the United States and British Open and Amateur championships, took 297 to tie with Harold (Jug) McSpaden, Winchester, Mass., for fifteenth place. Bobby's showing was better than his thirtieth of last year.

Walper Gets 30-Day Ban

Will Expire on April 15; Tourney Dates Set.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Baltimore, Md., April 4.—After a group meeting and an executive session here today at the Elkridge Club that lasted nearly eight hours, Ralph Beach, newly elected president of the Middle Atlantic P. G. A., announced that Leo Walper had been suspended for 30 days for a "violation of the code of ethics" at Sarasota, Fla.

The suspension took effect March 16 and will be lifted April 15, in time for him to defend his sectional P. G. A. title at Old Point Comfort, starting April 22.

Walper will have to write a public letter of apology to P. G. A. President George Jacobus in order to retain his good standing. The vote to suspend him was unanimous.

Officers for the season were elected and a ten-event schedule was approved, including four events for Washington; three proamateurs and another event not decided upon.

Qualifying rounds for the National P. G. A. at Shawnee-on-the-Delaware, Pa., July 10-16, will be held over a Baltimore course, to be decided on by a committee of four: Wiffy Cox, Kenwood; Ralph Beach, Suburban; Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase, and Bill Schreiber, of Mount Pleasant. The trials were set for a day the week of June 13 over the 36-hole route.

Other drastic steps taken by the body were, a plan to be adopted whereby the officers will not rotate, but will be voted upon from the floor, and another to hold

DennerBows To Straiges In Semifinal

BrookmanDefeatsReno; Ruby and Kessler Also Win.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

It was boom, boom, boom from the third round to the finish as Jack Dempsey's protege hammered his right fist on Mader's side until it glowed a dull, red color. He thumped him unmercifully during the last seven rounds, but couldn't put him away—to the great satisfaction of the crowd.

The 1,700 fans roared approvingly as Burman hit the deck in the second round after bumping into one of Mader's mad roundhouse rights. They howled as Mader fell face forward in the fifth after colliding with a Burman right, and again as he dropped to his knees along the ropes.

Clear Across Ring.

They roared again in the sixth as Burman, hitting his target with machine-gun accuracy, drove Mader clear across the ring into a neutral corner where he collapsed in a heap as the bell rang. It looked like the final blow of the one-sided argument, and Referee Eddie LaFond almost halted it, but decided to wait. It is well he did.

Mader, with a fighting heart as big as the seat of his droopy pants, rallied strongly in the last three rounds. He made a strong finish although he never had a chance. He tried to box Burman and succeeded in making the coming "world novice. Burman took healthy cuts champion" look very much like a at Mader's head and looked positively silly as Mader danced away on rubbery legs.

Irishman Wins First Two.

The Irishman won the first two rounds by comfortable margins, beating Burman to the punch, landing jarring rights to the side of his head, and digging left hooks in his mid-section up to the elbow. He wilted rapidly, however, as Burman crowded him into close-quarters and began ramming a right that must have felt like a sledge-hammer. You could see him wince with each succeeding blow, and you could almost see the strength oozing from his pores as Burman punched him with workmanlike diligence.

Mader staggered the redhead in the eighth with two surprisingly potent rights, then ducked to safety. Only in the last three rounds did he succeed in tying up Burman effectively, warding off his right. The raven-haired Irishman held continualy—once seizing the ropes with both mittens after crowding his opponent, but only infrequently did he avoid that punitive right.

Straiges Beats Denner.

Joey Straiges won a close decision over Abe Denner in a fast and entertaining eight-round semifinal. Denner won, on The Post scoresheet, but made a poor finish and it evidently swayed the judges. Referee LaFond voted a draw.

Denner was too quick for the Camden adonis, and hit him with too many right hands in the earlier rounds to lose. Straiges got in some good shots on his own account, shaking up the New Englander in the sixth with two stiff rights to the head. Generally, however, Denner made Joey look like he was battling Don Quixote's famed windmill—and with the same success.

El Brookman Wins.

El Brookman, rugged District welterweight, won a close and roundly booed decision over Joe Reno in a six-rounder that could have been a draw. Reno powdered Brookman's chin with his right at least a dozen times, especially in the first couple of rounds, which he won. Brookman took command from the third to the fifth, punching nicely to the body, but Reno rallied in the last and did well enough to deserve an even break.

Chester Ruby floored Al Dintiman for a nine count in the first of their four-round preliminary, dropped him again at the end of the third, and won a unanimous decision.

Terps' Nine Beats Cornell In Contest at College Park

Outdistancing a Cornell team which started well but faded, Maryland University defeated Cornerr, 12 to 8, at College Park yesterday.

Maryland was topped, 6 to 4, in the middle of the third but Terp batting added two more in the Maryland half of the inning to tie the score, 6-all.

Bill Steiner, Terp moundsman, was victimized to the tune of five runs in the third and was relieved by Charlie Weidinger who pitched steadily until the eighth when he was relieved by George Wood after being struck by a batted ball.

With Weidinger in the box, the Terps, settled down and held Cornell scoreless throughout the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth innings.

In the meantime Terp batters had a minor field day, as they hit everything offered by Stehnack, Cornell starting pitcher.

The Terrapins scored at least one run in every inning after the first as they hit pitch after pitch from Stehnack and Baker, who relieved him in the seventh.

Maryland batters accounted for 18 hits while Cornell was held to five by the four pitchers twirling for the Terps.

Flying Wild, Odds-On Favorite, Wins Bowie Feature by a Neck

Outdoors

With

Bill Ackerman.

The Post's All Outdoors Editor.

Jockeys' days-off in Florida are by no stretch of the imagination postmen's holidays, for in the Miami sector they regularly fish the blue waters of the Gulf Stream.

Paul Ryan hung on to a white marlin the other day, which weighed in at an even hundred, but before he booted it in over the roller, he was heard to remark, "Boy, what a steeplechaser that critter would make!"

ACKERMAN.

We have no reason to doubt it either, for these "stripers" put up the most spectacular surface battles we have ever seen.

This fish would have been tops in the Miami contest for that species had it not been for the record 161-pounder.

The standings in this contest, as of April 1, fail to show a single Washingtonian on the list. Something we have never seen in the three years it has been running.

Not for loca anglers not being there for trying, either, for from the reports their numbers are greater than ever before.

Note after note has come in of the catches of Winfield A. Treadwell, including one of his first sailfish. Of Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Gloria Grosvenor, Beverly Marshall and Frances Boone. Gloria's catch was also a sail, but not quite good enough to place. Dr. Walter Freeman and Sterling D. Ewald have been in the running with good catches of dolphin and kings. For the latter, you can also chalk up another sail. Walter R. McCallum has to his credit a tarpon weighing 139½ pounds.

These great "herring" have been rolling in the cuts and channels of the keys for the past three weeks. In our mail this morning, a letter from Bob Hutt, Jamaica Estates, N. Y., telling of one hooked under Eagles Key, and estimated to weigh in excess of 150 pounds, that wrecked his gear before it got loose. His best, during the month he fished out of Whale Harbor, and, as he says, the finest fishing I have ever experienced, was one that scaled 107 pounds. He has been fishing with Capts. Kemp and Hickman.

Questions sent in to this column should have a return address because all of them are not interesting to a great number of anglers. To get several off our file—the first two, we are unable to decipher the signatures, both postmarked Washington.

The law on striped bass, or rockfish, where it reads from June 1 to November 30, according to our understanding, means above tidewater.

The second query—Do licenses remain valid for 12 months from date? If a license is taken out for the trout season, is it also good for the bass season? There is a fiscal year in Maryland. From January 1, through both bass and trout season, the license is good until the following December 31. One license will carry you through both seasons in any State.

George S. Harnsberger, on a card postmarked Harrisonburg, Va., wants to know whether the earliness of the present spring will effect an earlier than usual run of blues on the North Carolina coast. That might well be the result of the present good weather, but so many different things have a direct bearing on the movements of bluefish, it is impossible to say what they might be doing several weeks from now. The usual spring run at Oregon Inlet generally hits during the last week of April and lasts through May, and they have already started to move north along the Florida coast.

Capt. Lev Raymond, dean of the Atlantic City tuna fleet, is leaving Miami now, to follow the run of bluefish up the coast. He will berth at Manteo, N. C., and carry charter parties as long as the fish remain at Oregon Inlet.

His 55-foot twin Fairbanks Morse Diesel cruiser is a swell boat for this kind of fishing. Able to go off shore, and stay there if necessary, in any kind of weather, with reasonable comfort. Eight can sleep aboard and fish with ease in the large cockpit.

It is very probable reservations will be available through Milton Gordon at the Atlas Sport Store.

Erl Roman, probably the best-known fishing editor in the United States, starts a series of stories next month in the magazine Motor Boating. They will feature the highly rated bone fishing, as it is practiced on the flats of the Bay of Florida.

Don't miss these articles for they are bound to be more than interesting. Erl has a background of light-tackle fishing that has been spread over every State in the Union, during the many years he represented the angling department of the Steel Fork & Hoe Co.

Harvard Netmen Play Navy April 9

Pays $3.90; Ghost Queen Takes Place

Favorite Players Have Big Day; Crowd of 8,000 Present.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie Race Track, April 4.—Flying Wild, a daughter of Flying Heels, gathered sufficient momentum in the Bowie stretch this afternoon to score a smashing victory in the Anne Arundel Purse, washday feature at this Prince Georges County turf plant.

Running as if she enjoyed the assignment, Flying Wild came to the imaginary wire a neck in advance of Ghost Queen, owned by W. H. Densam, of Washington. Jacqueline M. was a distant third. Only two others competed in the dash of five and one-half furlongs for 3-year-old fillies.

For the first time this meeting, weather conditions were excellent. A crowd of 8,000 turned out and favorites again were prominent among the winners. In fact, Flying Wild, at $3.90, proved the third odds-on choice of the day to visit the winner's circle.

Jockey Charlie Corbett was an important factor in Flying Wild's victory. He refused to allow his mount to participate too fully in the high speed splurge of Way Out and Mighty Sweet and then "sat cool" when Ghost Queen came from the rear of the field to get to the front in the early stretch. However, when the real test came, he put the power on Flying Wild and she fairly flew along to the drive, disposing of Ghost Queen in the final 50 yards.

This was Flying Wild's initial victory of the year. The filly was out four times in New Orleans and finished second twice.

Apprehend Wins.

The combination of Owner A. C. Compton, Trainer H. G. Bedwell and Jockey A. Shelhamer continued to bat 1,000 at this meeting when Apprehend, an ancient gelding, outclassed his opposition in the first race. He won by four lengths from Felwyn with Inactive third in a field of 11. Apprehend, making his first start since a winter's campaign in California, ran away from his rivals in the last quarter and was under a pull at the end. His ability was not a secret and he paid only $3.30.

Eddie Smith, Washington jockey, turned in a fine ride to win the second race with Prowl, half of the Trainer Pelleteri entry. Prowl had trouble taking the lead from Can Bloom and then had to be put to severe pressure to stave off the fast-closing bid of Acute, which came from last position. Trolight was third. The winner was another odds-on favorite at $3.50.

Favorite players scored their third straight success in the third race. Bartering Kate, 7-year-old mare, came through with a smashing finish to defeat My Elsie by half a length. Third money went to Combahee, far back of the first two horses. Charlie Corbett gave the winner a brilliant ride. Bartering Kate paid a $6.40 mutuel.

My Porter Pays $8.10.

My Porter, making his first start on any track, proved a good thing in the fourth event for maiden juveniles. He scampered to the wire two and a half lengths in front of the favorite, High Blame, with Baliris third. My Porter, operating in the silks of F. J. Buchanan, of Washington, returned his backers $8.10.

Houston or Columbus! That's Choice Baugh Has to Make

Special Dispatch to The Post.

St. Petersburg, Fla., April 4.—The Sammy Baugh boom in the camp of the St. Louis Cardinals collapsed suddenly today when Baugh himself let it be known that he is on his way to the minors.

"Frisch has given me my choice—Houston or Columbus," Baugh admitted. "It was pretty nice of him to put it that way. I don't know yet which club I'll join. I'll figure it out in a couple of days."

The impending release of Baugh by the Gas House Gang follows startlingly in the wake of glowing word pictures of the Redskin football star in field talents as stated by Frisch.

Throughout the past two weeks the Cardinals' manager has maintained that the tall Texan was the prize of his crop of third basemen, but apparently he didn't mean it.

Today, during the Cardinals' workout before the game with the Nats, Frisch called Baugh aside, draped a paternal arm across his shoulder and held earnest conversation with him. It was a few minutes later that Slingin' Sammy of football fame made it known that he was leaving the Cardinals.

Baugh appeared in no degree downcast by his release. In fact, he waxed philosophical.

"I'm satisfied I made a good showing for a fellow who never played much except college baseball. I learned plenty here with Frisch. I'll be back with the Cardinals next spring—perhaps before that. Steady work in a fast minor league will help me more than sitting on the bench with the Cardinals."

Baugh's release by the Cardinals is due directly to two factors, (1) his failure to connect solidly with pitching and (2) his inexperience. He has a trace of awkwardness in his batting stroke, an item which Frisch believes can be ironed out in the minor leagues.

Indications are that Baugh will choose Houston in the Texas League as his new baseball affiliation in preference to Columbus of the American Association, despite the fact that Columbus is in a higher-rated league.

Both teams are owned by the Cardinals, who can recall Baugh on 24-hour notice. The Redskin ace would be a powerful drawing card in Texas, where his football fame was first achieved.

Baugh is still completely undecided on his football future, but declared he had already rejected the 1938 contract sent him by George Marshall, owner of the Redskins.

"He's offering me the same salary I received last year," said Baugh. "What does a fellow have to do to make good in that league?"

But there was evidence that Baugh is not yet prepared to forsake professional football for a baseball career. His parting shot to Washington newspapermen today was:

"I'll be seeing you in September!"

Time Out!

BY CHET SMITH

Sandy has been using the same pop bottle for years!

At The Post . . . .

With Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Selections at Bowie.

There's an old saying, "Don't look for charity at a race track." However, there were 1,862 customers yesterday who really received a handout. They held daily-double tickets on the combination of Apprehend, winner of the first race, and Annino, withdrawn from the second race. Annino was on the track when he threw his rider and injured himself by crashing into the fence near the clubhouse. The stewards ordered him withdrawn from the race. Under the rules, Annino was a starter and the double bettors, as well as those who wagered individually on the horse, stood to lose their bets. The daily-double rules printed on the program say, "There shall be no refund of daily-double wagers in the event of a horse being scratched after leaving the paddock." Of course, I'm glad to see the 1,862 happy. However, if they got a rebate why were those who bet individually on the horse denied the same privilege? The handicapper here certainly has a lot of respect for John A. Manfuso's Aneroid. He piled a 129-pound assignment on the son of The Porter for the Bowie Handicap on Saturday. This action just about scratches Aneroid from the race. I don't believe his handlers are going to pack on 129 pounds even if they believe they can win. With that on the books against him, Aneroid might be asked to carry 159 in races for much more than the measly $3,500 purse offered here. Burning Star, 123; War Minstrel, 120

Jones Signed, Abrams Balks at Rematch

Local Boxer Asks Bigger 'Gate' Slice

Baltimorean to Receive $500; Fishel Asks for 15%.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Jimmy Jones, of Baltimore, has signed a contract to box George Abrams next Monday night at the Arena, but Abrams insists on more money than has been offered him before the match can be closed.

Jones will receive $500 as his share of the receipts, but the matchmaker wants to slice Abrams' end too thinly to suit the local middleweight.

"I'm asking 15 per cent of the gate, and I don't think it's too much," Syd Fishel, Abrams' pilot, stated, "and I'm not going to let my boy go into the ring for a peanut-butter sandwich and glass of milk. Ahearn wants to give us three cheers.

"Without George in there Jones won't draw peanuts, and he knows it. We're not going to fight unless we get a fair break on the money. I'll fight winner take all, and if Jones has so much confidence in his ability why don't he take it on that basis?"

Jones knocked out the fast-stepping local middleweight when George blindly stepped into a round-house right in a recent fight at the Arena. Abrams had been leading in the fight until the blow flattened him for the count.

A return match was sought immediately but Heine Blaustein, the manager of Jones, demanded a $1,000 guarantee for his boy. The case paralleled the Joey Armstrong-Lou Gevinson tussle. Archibald knocked out the local featherweight and demanded a $2,000 guarantee for a return bout that was to have headlined the kiddies "Hot Lunch Fund" show. Archibald and Gevinson haven't been rematched.

right fielder, smashed a hot double to right-center and McDonough clattered across the plate with Vermont's first and only score.

Bertrand, however, was far from disgraced in the recapitulation, for the husky right-hander yielded only a pair of hits, fanned four and poled out a double in his only appearance at the plate.

An early feature of the game was a daring triple steal that Georgetown worked in the first inning after two were out.

Tony Barabas was on third, Joe Keegin on second and Tom Keating on first, when Barabas made a dash for the plate as Berry returned the ball to Roger Beadle, Vermont's starting pitcher. Beadle hurriedly threw to the plate to catch the fleet Barabas but he slid in under the peg and Keegin and Keating each advanced a base to complete one of baseball's rarest plays.

-:- Facts and Faces -:-

Dr. Pepper's softball ten, which already has Abe Rosenfield and Bunker Hill in the fold, will soon sign Jack Freedman, third ranking pitcher in the country last season . . . a few difficulties between Owner Wash Williams, Manager Phil Fox and Freedman have yet to be ironed out, however . . . Speaking of softball, Orren Shanks, Ehrlich Poultry mound ace last season, had his ears firmly pinned Saturday when he attempted to cap an iron-man stunt against Dr. Pepper . . . After hurling four innings for a pick-up team against Sherwood Playground, the former fighter took the mound against the pop boys who proceeded to pop him for a 16-2 decision . . . Shanks, not particularly averse to exalting himself, found some solace in his misery, however, for he won the first game, 6-2, and smashed a homer in the second contest . . . Joe Kuhel had better boost his present anemic batting average if he would receive a homecoming welcome from the Chicago fans . . . The same Windy City citizenry who have been accustomed to cheering Big Zeke Bonura when he rode one out of the lot won't take so kindly to the erstwhile Nat and the .225 mark he is sporting in exhibition games.

Another challenger has appeared on the fistic horizon to add to the troubles of John Henry Lewis, the fast-slipping light-heavyweight ruler . . . The newest threat is Tiger Warrington, who last week moved into the division's "first ten" . . . Warrington, beaten only once in 9 starts, includes Young Herrera, Bud Mignault and Steve Dudas among his victims . . . Warrington's manager, Bobby North, plans to match his charge with Al Gainer or Tiger Jack Fox before demanding a title fight with Lewis.

Seattle has in Bill Boyd (not the movie star) a promising young heavy, or else several of the top-notchers in that class are buffaloed . . . Lee Ramage, Bob Nestell and Chuck Crowell are only a few who have turned down all offers to meet the hard-hitting Westerner . . . if his efforts to obtain bouts at home continues to meet with discouragement, Boyd plans to come East to punch noses . . . Tommy Farr's next foe will probably be Gunnar Barlund, the Finnish Finisher, who is headed for the Coast to battle Chuck Crowell . . . Barlund and his manager feel that Mike Jacobs and Maxie Baer gave Barlund the well-known runaround and demand the Farr fight as part retribution . . . still on the subject of fighters . . . After seeing the preview of his performance as Claire Trevor's bodyguard in "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse," Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom reportedly said in all seriousness, "Barrymore better look to his laurels" . . . Reports also are numerous that Frank (Lefty) O'Doul, former Brooklyn outfielder, will take over the managerial reins of that club in 1939 . . . providing Burleigh Grimes, the present pilot, is unable to separate the daffiness from the Dodgers.

Ross Kayoes Schaft; Conn Debut Victor

Welter Champ Whips Minneapolis Boxer in Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

Schaft, who weighed 149½ to the champion's 142 pounds, carried the fight to Ross in the third round, but saw his wide right swings pass over the Chicagoan's head. Schaft went to his knees for a count of eight. Ross connected with a sharp right shortly after and the challenger was groggy.

Schaft bored in once in the fourth round, only to be sent against the ropes with a strong right. Another short right sent him down for a count of nine.

Wheat Tumbles To 3-Year Low; Big Crop Looms

Prices Drop as Much as 2⅛ Cents; Corn, Oats and Rye Lower.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 4.—Downward plunges of 2⅛ cents maximum took Chicago wheat futures today to well below 80 cents a bushel, the first time in three years. Simultaneously, rye and oats collapsed to season new bottom price records.

Chiefly responsible for brisk selling flurries and for the tumble of values were reports pointing to increased prospects of a bumper domestic crop of winter wheat this season. Besides, there were auspicious weather reports from the spring wheat area Northwest, together with only an indifferent European demand for wheat from North America.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 1⅛@2⅛ cents lower, compared with Saturday's finish; May, 82⅝@82½; July, 79¼@79⅝; corn 1 cent to 1⅝ cents down; May, 59⅝@59¾; July, 60⅞@61; oats, 1⅛@1⅝ off; rye showing 2⅝@3⅛ loss, and provisions unchanged to 10 cents setback.

Cotton Yields; Foreign Selling

New York, April 4 (AP).—Cotton eased today under foreign offerings and owing to easier markets abroad. July sold off from 8.66 to 8.56, and closed at 8.63, with final prices 9 to 11 points net lower.

The market opened 8 to 9 points lower in response to the action of Liverpool and Bombay and under liquidation. Foreign offerings increased and prices soon eased to net losses of 15 to 18 points. The reaction to 8½ cents for May uncovered good trade buying but rallies were only partial.

Broker Submits Plan To Help Railroads

New York, April 4.—A proposal that the Administration form a railroad reorganization board and guarantee the obligations of reorganized carriers has been suggested to officials in Washington, by Charles Martin Clark, jr., head of the New York Stock Exchange firm of Charles Clark & Co., as a means of breaking the present jam in railroad reorganizations.

Declaring that the financial plight now facing the carriers is in many ways similar to the banking emergency of 1933 and the foreclosure crisis which faced home owners during the depression, Mr. Clark has suggested to the Administration that emergency measures similar to those which solved the two former crises be taken in respect to the railroads.

Guaranty Says Young Got Control of C. & O. With Small Investment.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 4.—Robert R. Young got control of the Van Sweringen rail properties once valued at $2,000,000,000 with a personal cash investment of only $254,000, counsel for the Guaranty Trust Co. charged in Federal Court today.

Young, fighting Wall Street banking interests for control of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, profitable 9,000-mile remnant of the system, is asking a preliminary injunction against Guaranty Trust Co. to restrain it from voting 1,278,000 shares of Chesapeake Corporation stock which it holds as trustee. Judge Albert C. Coxe reserved decision until tomorrow.

Young charged Guaranty had violated its trusteeship because of its financial relations with General Motors Corporation, J. P. Morgan & Co., and Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. He asked that Guaranty Trust be removed as trustee, and be ordered to give Young voting rights to 710,500 shares of Chesapeake Corporation stock. A temporary restraining order against Guaranty was issued last week.

Theodore Kiendl, counsel for the bank, in answering opposing counsel's argument for the injunction, emphasized Young's small cash investment by pointing out that General Motors Corporation, and George A. Ball, Muncie, Ind., glass jar manufacturer, had invested not quite $3,000,000 in bonds of Allegheny Corporation, top Van Sweringen Holding Co., which controls Chesapeake Corporation.

Extra German Duties Revoked by Treasury

The Treasury revoked yesterday extra tariff duties against certain German agricultural products, particularly wheat and beans. The extra duties were levied originally to offset export bounties paid by the German government to encourage the foreign sale of the products.

The Treasury said it revoked the special tariffs because the German government had repealed its bounties on these products. The action meant that German wheat and beans, for instance, coming into this country, will pay only the ordinary tariff.

Brokers' Loans Drop $55,844,895 in Month

New York, April 4 (AP).—A decline last month of $55,844,895 in member borrowings against securities was reported today by the New York Stock Exchange. Collateral loans at the end of March, the exchange announced, totaled $521,116,919 against $576,961,814 a month earlier.

The shrinkage in brokers' borrowings in March accompanied the widest downswing in stocks since last autumn and was accepted as indication of further liquidation of marginal holdings.

The Market

By A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Generally Higher But Leaders Are Heavy; Wheat and Cotton Lower.

New York, April 4.—Markets were quieter following last week's unusual activity, stocks selling for the most part slightly higher in a movement in which the customary leaders were not able to join because of profit taking. Trading was the smallest in nearly two weeks. Government bonds were higher. Cotton and wheat were weak, the latter selling off 1⅞ cents to 82½ cents a bushel. French exchange rose against the dollar.

At the opening and during the early trading most stocks were slightly under last week's closing, but some of the leaders displayed real weakness which they were a long time in shaking off. Among these were United States Steel, Anaconda, duPont, General Electric, International Nickel, Kennecott, Westinghouse Electric, and Bethlehem Steel. Traders who had entered the market toward the low of last week found it difficult to resist the temptation to take quick profits. While these stocks rallied from their early lows, they were not able to rebound to previous closing prices.

Utilities moved irregularly, with American Telephone pointing the way with an advance to level 12 points above the low of last week. Oils were irregular, Shell Union particularly yielding to pressure. Among other industrials, except the leaders already mentioned, prices were generally higher.

Railroad stocks were uniformly higher, gains running from fractions to more than 3 points. Union Pacific led this group, with Pennsylvania, Chesapeake & Ohio and Santa Fe registering gains of a point or so.

As long as a large percentage of the railroad industry is compelled to lead a hand-to-mouth existence the restoration of general business activity will be difficult, for railroad spending normally contributes greatly to the country's prosperity. At the moment some important systems are shut out of the market for rails and equipment. Hence the importance attached to conferences between leading rail men and the Administration in Washington.

Railroads.

It seems doubtful whether anything better than a stopgap can be produced under emergency conditions. The permanent solution goes too deep to permit of hurried treatment even if Congress could approach it as a national issue. That there is too much unnecessary mileage seems to be generally conceded. How to eliminate it is just as much an economic problem as it ever was. Members of Congress may view the matter as a national problem up to the point where the suggested solution conflicts with their own sectional interests and then the point of view will likely as not become parochial.

Now that the railroads have real competition to contend with, the cure for their unbalanced budgets manifestly lies in curtailment of expenses. Consolidations and the elimination of duplicating facilities are one method of cutting expenses, but abandonments involve the dismissal of workers and it is difficult to imagine Congress taking steps that would have that result.

The other major item of expense that has been throwing railroad accounts out of balance and has been a contributing factor in placing one-third of the country's mileage in receivership or bankruptcy, is the tax burden. Mileage abandonments would destroy taxable values, for the carriers contribute an important part of the cost of local governments, particularly in the West. Every abandonment application in recent years has brought a storm of protest from local governments and it is difficult to imagine the average Congressman flying in the face of hometown opposition.

Railroad circles look for nothing better than an emergency measure and that apparently is what the market expects, for the rail stocks had strong support today.

Out of Line.

The recent weakness in stocks has forced many down below their equity in net liquid assets, which fact suggests at least that the selling was overdone. Several dozen issues on the stock exchange are below their quick asset values.

Foreigners Sold.

Advices from abroad now give a more accurate picture of the part foreign investors played in our market's decline last week. They also explain the causes of this selling. It is made plain that the type of investors who usually are credited with shrewdness believe our shares are selling too low but they are too much disturbed by American politics to allow their investment judgment to prevail.

Telephone.

The market is taking a less pessimistic view of the one-man report to Congress on the telephone industry. A. T. & T. was one of the strongest stocks on the list today, retracing some of the backward steps taken when the report came out last week. Because only one member of the Federal Communications Commission signed the report, it is generally assumed that the others were approached, but refused to sign, preferring to make their own observations on the stack of one-sided testimony which Commissioner Walker used as the basis of his recommendations. The fact that telephone officials summoned to the hearing were not allowed to present briefs or to give any information other than what the commission's counsel asked for may build up in Congress a resistance to any recommendations of the FCC.

Bank Statements.

Bank statements in many instances display an extraordinary increase in holdings of State and municipal bonds compared with December 31. The reason is that the statements coincided with the date when the banks happened to have taken up considerable amounts of New York State and New York City bills and short-term notes. Another characteristic of the condition reports is the general reduction in United States Government securities, which for some banks amounted to more than $100,000,000 for the quarter. This reduction was created largely by the maturity around the tax date of big amounts of Treasury bills, which the banks allowed to run off without replacement.

New York, April 4 (U.P.).—Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of General Motors Corporation, announced today he would accept no more bonuses. His new policy will apply for the year 1937 and he will take no bonus for that year, he said. His bonus in 1936 was $411,161; his salary $150,000.

Bonuses for 1937 will total $13,908,809, the annual G. M. report revealed today. There were six officers listed for bonuses in excess of $100,000 for 1937, the maximum being $167,000. In 1936, William S. Knudsen, president, received a bonus of $387,450 and a salary of $120,000.

Bank Stocks Recover From Year's Low Level

New York, April 4.—After touching a new low for the year on March 31, New York City bank stocks recovered slightly from this level, but still showed a substantial loss for the week, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster.

The aggregate market value of 16 leading issues at the 1938 low point on March 31 was $1,122,016,000. A moderate rally raised this figure as of April 1 to $1,187,155,000, compared with $1,227,611,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of $40,456,000, or 3.30 per cent.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, April 4 (AP) (U. S. Dept. This business, while confined largely to fine and half-blood grades, represented a broadening of the outlets for wool compared with the restricted demand which prevailed during most of February and early March. Quotations on fine and half-blood domestic wools were steady to firmer than at the close of last week and mostly steady on coarser grade wools.

FHA Will Aid Building Plans In Washington

3,500 Housing Committees Now Organized in U. S., McGehee Says.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Complete co-operation by the Federal Housing Administration was promised yesterday by Deputy Administrator Charles C. McGehee to the Washington Building Congress in connection with its property renovizing campaign in the Washington area. Mr. McGehee addressed a luncheon meeting of the organization at the Lafayette Hotel and outlined details of the Housing Administration's property improvement plan whereby home owners may obtain convenient Government-insured financing for additions, alterations and repairs.

The speaker discussed organization of 3,500 better housing committees throughout the country since restoration of the plan. These committees, co-operating with business and industry and with the Housing Administration are expected to give the program a decided impetus.

The original plan, under which modernization of property was financed to the extent of $560,000,000, thus providing a market for building materials and labor, and notably increasing the demand for materials, labor and services allied with the building industry, was reviewed by Mr. McGehee.

Testimonial to Grove.

President James A. Fulton, of the Home Life Insurance Co., of New York, was in Washington yesterday to honor Paul F. Grove, jr., local underwriter of the Vernon W. Holleman Agency of the company, for his sales record. At the agency in the Shoreham Building, Mr. Fulton recommended to life insurance management both in the field and home offices a three-point program which, as a matter of genuine co-operative effort, should do much to correct present-day conditions in the life insurance field.

PAUL F. GROVE.

"First," he said, "throughout the entire business, we should lessen the emphasis on the volume of new business. The sale of a new policy is a meaningless gesture so far as the purchaser is concerned if that policy is not carried long enough for the purpose for which it was purchased to be realized. Emphasis on volume represents high-pressure selling, and high-pressure selling means lapses. The time ought soon to pass when a life insurance sale is urged on the grounds that a life insurance man needs the business or wants to win a button or a trip."

Second, President Fulton observed, any interview that is intelligently carried through with a prospective life insurance buyer should begin with the question in the mind of the salesman, "What problem does this prospect have that life insurance will solve?" The interview should be based on a definite proposal intelligently pre-

Curb Market Closes Higher; Trading Light

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 4.—The curb market closed generally higher today although late offerings pared down earlier advances. Trading was light. Sales totaled 116,000 shares, compared with 183,000 Friday.

A good part of the list registered little net change for the day. On the gaining side were Pittsburgh Plate Glass, up 3¾ at 60; United Shoe Machinery up 2½ at 56½ and Lion Oil, up 1¾ at 20. Fractional advances included American Gas & Electric at 21¾; McWilliams Dredging, 8½; Montgomery Ward, 126½, and Northern States Power "A," 8¾.

Discovery Bond NewType of Surety

New York, April 4.—American Surety Co. of New York and its affiliate, New York Casualty Co., jointly announced today that they had originated a new form of fidelity insurance called the "Discovery Bond," which provides protection not only against the future dishonesty of employes covered thereunder but also against past acts of dishonesty not yet discovered even though the employe was not bonded at the time of defaultt.

"The Discovery Bond," says the announcement, should carry a real appeal to employers now without fidelity protection since it provides the only method available to obtain protection against past as well as future employe dishonesty.

"A survey recently completed of the fidelity insurance carried by a cross section of American industrial and mercantile organizations emphasized the fact that a large percentage of these companies were without the protection afforded by fidelity bonds which guarantee the honesty of employes. It is estimated that employe dishonesty, allegedly one of the most sinister and difficult of all crimes to detect, exacts an annual toll from American business, large and small, in excess of $200,000,000.

New York, April 4.—Despite capacity operations last year, nine leading domestic aircraft manufacturers have nearly $131,000,000 in unfilled orders on hand, or more than 27 per cent in excess of the backlog a year ago, according to Poor's Industry and Investment Surveys.

"The Vinson Naval Construction bill now before Congress would, at an additional cost of $106,000,000, expand the Navy Air Force to 3,000 planes from 2,050 authorized at present," says the analysis. "Spread over a five-year period, this program would give certain domestic plane manufacturers some $20,000,000 'extra' business annually."

THE PARKER CORR GENERAL DISTRIBUTORS INCORPORATED INVESTORS

Boston, Mass., April 4.—Each month since last September business failures have increased over the corresponding month of the previous year. But total failures are running less than half what they were in the so-called prosperous years of 1927, 1928 and 1929.

Bob Burns Says—

I'll betcha if you look at the pictures of the people in this paper you'll see that most of them are smilin'. That's because they've been told that if they want to get on in the world they'll hav'ta smile.

My Uncle Glum was a natural born grouch. He never could hold a job very long because he'd either get fired because they couldn't stand his grouchy disposition, or he'd quit because he didn't like the job. We didn't think he'd find a job to fit his nature, but not long ago I met him and was surprised to see a happy glint in his eyes.

I says, "Uncle Glum, what has made this wonderful change in you?" And he says, "I finally found a job that I enjoy. I'm a station master in a big railroad depot where there's 80 trains run out of there every day and I get to see somebody miss pret' near every one of 'em."
